Farm Price Policies Made By Wickard, Henderson

Agreement Reached As President Sends Administrator's Name to Senate

Secretary of Agriculture Wickard and Price Administrator Leon Henderson, in a joint statement last night, announced complete agreement on price and production policies designed to head off inflation and stabilize the cost of living.

The two officials, given joint jurisdiction over farm-price standards laid down by the Price Control Act, announced they would take all possible steps to maintain abundant supplies at prices fair to farmers and consumers.

Their joint declaration "to spare no effort to prevent inflation" was released after the nomination of Henderson to be Federal Price Administrator was sent to the Senate by the President, and referred to the Banking Committee.

Confirmation Expected

Confirmation of Henderson, possibly even without committee hearings, was indicated. Senate Minority Leader McNary said there would be no Republican fight about the nomination of Henderson, whom he regards as "fit and courageous." Leading members of the farm bloc said they would not oppose Henderson, but continued to challenge "hold to parity" price policies attributed to Wickard.

Wickard, called before the Senate Agriculture Committee on Saturday to "explain" his position, continued to advocate "parity" rather than the higher farm control levels set up by the Price Act.

This brought further protests yesterday from Senators who supported the Bankhead amendment giving Wickard dual control with Henderson over farm prices.

Bankhead Takes Floor

Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, took the floor to oppose what he termed any "clearance sale" of Government-owned cotton by the Commodity Credit Corporation. He said farmers stand to lose $17,500,000 if prices fall to recover from last week's $5 a bale drop, and challenged the right of the Commodity Credit Corporation to sell cotton below cost and expenses, or to turn it over to other agencies to be exchanged for goods.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, said he was drawing a joint resolution "which should make clear there can be no lawful restraints on farm prices until they reach the levels where Henderson and Wickard are authorized to put on the brakes."

The joint statement issued by Henderson and Wickard did not mention the word parity but said "farm legislation and the farm production goals for 1942 have now placed floors under the farm prices of all major products at levels sufficient to protect farmers in carrying out a great increase in production."

Moves Planned

First among their objectives, Henderson and Wickard placed "abundant production," which they said has been and will remain "the consumer's best assurance of fair prices."

So increased production of meats and livestock products will not be hampered by high feed costs, they

Tag Communists And Bundists, Dies Proposes

Representative Martin Dies (Democrat), of Texas, last night called on Attorney General Francis Biddle to require Communists and Bundists to register with the Government in a move to "exclude them from places where they can get and disseminate valuable information."

The chairman of the House Committee on un-American Activities said in a letter to Biddle that he was convinced that valuable information is being give nto the enemy by some members of these organizations and, until we close up this loophole, other measures will be inadequate."

He said Biddle had the power to require such registrations under amendments to the Foreign Agents Registration Act approved by Congress last week. At that time the Texan sought to have Communist and Bundist organizations specifically designated, a proposal which Secretary of State Cordell Hull reportedly termed dangerous to Russo-American relations.

Parasite Purge

Total of 3 Now Willing To Leave City

As the great parasite purge of 1942 enters its fourth day, counting Sunday, The Post's Secret Six Committee is happy to report the discovery of two more persons willing to give up their space in Washington to as many war workers as care to use a nice apartment at 1830 Seventeenth Street Northwest.

That brings the total of discoveries to an impressive three—but all was far from quiet along the Potomac last night what with telephones jingling and the postman making extra trips to bring nominees for the post of Parasite No. 1.

And the Mail Flows In

To be frank about it, the committee is ready to ask Defense Housing Coordinator Charles T. Palmer for a commandeered apartment in which to set up headquarters and the Civil Service Commission for 100 good stenographers to help answer the mail from patriots willing to come across with names of "useless citizens."

"If I were selecting the parasites," wrote one, "I would start with Leon Henderson and his aides, and I could mention a dozen others in high positions."

A Tale of Woe

"I nominate for ousting as parasites," another asserted, "the reported 34,000 Federal press agents who are wasters of the Government's paper, money and time. The

Schulte to Ask Probe of Lodge Reappointment

Would Have Inquiry Into ABC Include Commissioner Mason

By Howard F. Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

Representative William Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, last night said he would ask Congress to investigate yesterday's reappointment of Thomas Ellis Lodge as chairman of the District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

He said he would request that the probe include Commissioner Guy Mason, under whose supervision ABC laws are administered and whose private law firm, Schulte charged, "represents liquor interests here and elsewhere."

Schulte Charges Abuse

Announcement of Lodge's reappointment for a four-year term was made late yesterday by Mason. There were two other undisclosed candidates for the job and it was reported reliably that the verdict in favor of Lodge was not unanimous among the Commissioners.

Schulte attacked the reappointment within an hour after the announcement was made.

"Many people," he said, "have been abused under the czaristic attitude of the ABC Board and I intend to go into the whole thing thoroughly."

He said a "lot of wrong" had been done under the "peculiar setup" of the ABC group and that he would ask the House District Committee, of which he is a member, to authorize an inquiry at the first possible moment.

Difficult Job, Mason Says

Commissioner Mason, who admits freely that one of his law firm's largest clients is the Park & Tilford liquor distributing company, defended Lodge with the statement: "He is the best ABC Board chairman we have ever hand."

Mason said he reviewed carefully the chairman's record and "found

Big Guns Duel

By the Associated Press

Singapore, Feb. 2.—Smoke floated across Singapore throughout today from fires started by Japanese air raiders engaged in a grand-scale effort to soften up the stronghold for a final invasion thrust across the mile-wide Johore Strait.

By midmorning four air-raid warnings sounded and bombs were dropped on widely separated parts of this besieged island. Firemen quickly isolated the blazes the bombs started, limiting the damage to small areas.

The resounding thump of bombs blended now and then with the thunder of artillery fire from both British and Japanese batteries as reinforced imperial defenders took up positions within sight of the invading columns across the strait in Johore Bahru.

Invasion Effort Smashed

A small-scale sample of what Singapore's defenders would do to an invasion effort was given yesterday when three small troop-laden enemy craft—the first to attempt an approach to the island—found themselves engulfed in a storm of fire. One of the craft was sunk and the others retreated.

(The British radio broadcast a Batavia report tonight saying Japanese naval formations were preparing for an assault upon Singapore in support of land forces from the Malayan mainland.)

Opinions here was divided as to whether the Japanese would risk what certainly would be tremendous losses in an attempt to storm the island or would be content with keeping the island under siege while diverting available forces for operations against the East Indies Archipelago and Rangoon, port for the Burma Road.

May Seek Prestige Victory

The majority of observers believed Singapore's great prestige value would prompt the invader to pay the price of a mighty effort to get across Johore Strait after small units try to filter into Singapore in small craft or by air.

[Malaya dispatches broadcast from Tokyo, according to the United Press, said the Japanese army was moving into the southern tip of the peninsula "like tidal waves." They said many warehouses on the island were in flames. Berlin reports, attributed to Tokyo, said Johore Bahru, capital of the Sultanate across the strait from Singapore, was ablaze, and that the general belief in Tokyo was that the fortress would fall before February 11, the

Yanks on Bataan Now Standing 17 Miles From Peninsula's Tip

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's hard-fighting little army in Luzon now holds only about a half of rugged Bataan Peninsula, the War Department indicated yesterday, in a report telling of the repulse of a heavy, new assault launched by Japan's finest shock troops.

In the Borneo area, meanwhile, four U. S. bombers shot down nine Jap fighter planes with a loss of one of the bombers.

While two whole enemy divisions attacked the right and left of MacArthur's front, an Army communique said, picked Jap assault forces known as "Tatoris" attacked from the sea on the west coast of Bataan.

Driven Back Into Sea

Savage fighting followed in the jungle underbrush and the American artilery went into action. After heavy fighting, the frontal attack was stopped and the "Tatoris" were driven back into the sea. All of them were either killed or captured.

But, though MacArthur's men can chalk up another success in their fight against an enemy many times their number, the War Department revealed that the American-Filipino line now is probably about halfway down Bataan Peninsula.

The communique declared that a frontal attack and an envelopment movement was attempted by the Japs "in the Pilar area." Pilar is a town on the eastern coast of the peninsula about 17 miles from its tip.

If MacArthur's new line, probably established before the latest battle runs west from about Pilar, it is likely to extend across to Bagac, perhaps in front of the only east-to-west road on the peninsula.

In another announcement the War Department reported that American heavy bombers had gone into action again in the Southwest Pacific, raiding two Jap air fields in Malaya and shooting down nine enemy planes over Borneo.

Were After Jap Shipping

The night Army communique announced that four Army bombers were en route to attack Japanese shipping in the harbor of Balik Papan on Macassar Strait, when attacked by enemy fighter planes. One of the American four-engine bombers was shot down as our gunners accounted for nine of the Japs in the ensuing fight.

The bombing attacks on Malaya were directed against Kuala Lumpur and Kuantan, major enemy air operating centers in the assault on Singapore. Because of poor visibility, the War Department said, it was impossible to tell what damage was done by the Flying Fortresses'

Nazi Defense Is Stiffening, Reds Admit

Moscow (Tuesday), Feb. 3.—The Red army continued to pound the Germans all along the central and southern fronts today in a vast effort to disrupt the Nazis' spring offensive plans, but the midnight communique acknowledged stiffening resistance and the withdrawal of Soviet forces from the eastern Crimean port of Feodosiya.

Feodosiya (which the Germans said they recaptured January 19 after losing it December 31) was abandoned "some days ago," the communique said. It told of the repulse of strong German counter-attacks, with heavy losses in men and equipment.

(The Berlin radio said the Germans had repulsed the Russians east of Artemovsk on the Kharkov-Rostov Railway—a point some 80 miles east of the salient which the Rus-

Nazi Armored Forces Reported Within 60 Miles of Derna

By the United Press

Cairo, Feb. 2.—Germany's armored forces pounded eastward across Libya to within 60 miles of Derna tonight, while British and Indian troops fought a rear guard action and the Royal Air Force fighters bombed transport columns in the Agheila and Agedabia areas behind the German lines.

A British communique said German forces under the command of Gen. Erwin Rommel had forced the Fourth Indian Division to evacuate Barce, 100 miles west of Derna, and added that at Slonta, only 60 miles southwest of Derna, the Eleventh Indian Infantry Brigade counter-attacked and halted the Nazi column's advance.

Presence of German troops at Slonta indicated an advance of approximately 50 miles since Barce was given up, and the British and Indian fighters began falling back under what was described as an at-

Youngest in Rank

36-Year-Old Captain Made A General

President Roosevelt yesterday elevated a young General Staff officer, whose permanent rank is captain, to be a temporary brigadier general.

Jumped over hundreds of his seniors was Laurence S. Kuter, an Army flier and assistant secretary of the War Department general staff, who already held temporary advanced rank as lieutenant colonel. Only 36 years old, he becomes the Army's youngest general.

He is the first permanent captain to be so advanced in World War II, although several permanent majors, holding advanced rank as lieutenant colonels or colonels, have been temporarily promoted to be brigadier generals.

During World War I, a few captains reached the temporary rank of brigadier general. Army men recalled last night, that Gen. Douglas MacArthur, now commanding America's Army in the Philippines, was one of them.

A hurried check revealed that Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, now commander of the First Army, and Maj. Gen. Benjamin Foulois, retired chief of the Air Corps, received a similar promotion, although there many have been a few others. All

Fleet Doing Its Utmost, Nimitz Says

Using Every Sinew To Take the War To Enemy, He Adds

By the Associated Press

Honolulu, Feb. 2.—Every ship and every man of the United States Pacific Fleet is being utilized to the fullest extent to bring the war to the enemy's front door, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz said today.

The fleet's spectacular assault on Japanese concentrations in the Gilbert and Marshall Islands Sunday, the commander in chief of the Pacific Fleet commented, was in accordance with the characteristic United States Navy tradition—seek out the enemy and destroy him.

"The question, 'Where's the fleet?' was answered partly by the splendid achievements of our ships and planes in attacks on enemy concentrations in the Marshall and Gilbert Islands," Admiral Nimitz said in a statement.

"A month ago when I assumed command of the Pacific Fleet," Admiral Nimitz said, " I said that I had undertaken a great responsibility and obligation to my country which I would do my utmost to discharge.

"Since then events have emphasized the importance of our Pacific forces in the broad strategy of the Allied war efforts. I know that a question uppermost in the minds of

Young War Evacuee Coming Home to Take Care of 'Mom'

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Darne, of Vienna, Va., are eagerly awaiting the arrival of their daughter, Mrs. Alston Richardson, and her 11-year-old son, Robert, who landed at San Francisco Sunday with a group of 300 evacuees after a rough voyage from the Pacific war zone.

Mrs. Darne, who hasn't seen her daughter or grandson for three years, said they were expected by train Thursday morning. "My daughter called me from San Francisco Sunday night," said Mrs. Darne. "I hadn't heard a word from her since she sailed from San Diego November 15 to join her husband, who was stationed out in the Pacific with the Navy. I've been nearly worried to death."

Mrs. Darne said her daughter's husband, an electrician's mate, first class, was on land duty somewhere in the Pacific. Until last September, Mrs. Darne said, he was on duty aboard an aircraft carrier.

Mr. and Mrs. Darne listened proudly when they were told about Robert and his farewell to his father, whose parting words were:

"Look, fellow, you're 11 years old and you're a big man now. There's a war on. You take care of mom. I've got to stay here."

Robert didn't shed a tear, but like a real sailor, he just snapped to attention, saluted and said:

"Yes sir."

Inside stuff is that giving Douglas the feature spot is to up OCD's drawing power, where the take has been disappointing. Douglas' box office draught, which has been s. r. o. at flicker palaces all over the country, is due in no small degree to profile appeal. Eyewitness Story of Macassar

Elaborate Balloon Barrage Gave Japs Scant Protection

By the Associated Press

Batavia, Feb. 2.—The Japanese invasion fleet in the Strait of Macassar used an elaborate balloon barrage to protect it from Dutch and American bombers, but a total of 32 Japanese ships were sunk, fired or heavily damaged and 16 of their planes were shot down in the four-day running battle, two Dutch air officers said today in an eyewitness account.

"For two days before the attack we had been making reconnaissance flights over the Macassar Strait on the lookout for a Japanese invasion fleet, but because of heavy, low-lying cloud banks we saw no ships at all," one of the two officers, now on leave from his squadron, told the Aneta Agency.

"Finally on Friday, January 23, through a rift in the clouds we sighted the enemy—a convoy of about 23 ships as far as we could make out. The convoy was hugging the Celebes coast, and had reached a point east of Balik Papan when we discovered it.

"The convoy consisted of two rows of transport ships protected by cruisers and destroyers, and although we were quite sure it was headed for Borneo (on the opposite side of the strait), it was too far from the island to have made any landings."

"Our planes," the second officer said, "attacked immediately—four bomber patrols and two fighter

Daylight Time? No, 'War Time,' President Says

By the Associated Press

When clocks are moved ahead an hour February 9, they are going to operate on "war time."

That is the name picked by President Roosevelt for the new daylight saving time decreed by Congress as a means of conserving power for defense operations.

The White House said yesterday that railroads, Government agencies and industries had been inquiring about a terminology for the new time and that Mr. Roosevelt thought "war time" would do because it offered an accurate description.

The law says standard time shall be advanced an hour.

War Sidelights

Russian Mud Paralyzing, Vichy Hears

Vichy, Feb. 2 (AP).—Soldiers fighting in the intense Russian cold lose part of their senses, Jacques Doriot, Rightist leader who headed a group of French volunteers in the Nazi army, said yesterday in a graphic description of Germany's paralyzed attack.

Speaking at a mass meeting in Paris, Doriot said the mud during the rainy season following and preceding the Russian winter was almost as paralyzing as the cold.

Doriot said that even during the early days of December the mercury dropped to 43 degrees below zero on the front occupied by the French contingent.

"At those temperatures everything changes," he said. "Men lose part of their faculties, their fingers become swollen and their joints become stiff with ankylosis."

Breaks Back to Enlist

New York, Feb. 2 (AP).—John T. Whitaker, Chicago Daily News foreign correspondent, wants to serve in the United States Army so badly that he has had his back broken to correct an old injury and be fit for service.

The 36-year-old newspaperman entered Polyclinic Hospital January 16 for the operation and must remain in a cast for five months.

Whitaker, who was expelled from Rome because his dispatches displeased the Italians, explained the operation this way:

"After watching them (the Germans) bully and beat a lot of poorly equipped Europeans, I'd like to participate with American troops when they make them whimper."

Whitaker fractured his back while boxing in college and the injury never healed properly.

'White Way' Menaced

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 2 (AP).—The New York State Power Authority told Gov. Lehman today the State's power situation was such that "a blackout of the Great White Way" in New York City appeared probable by 1943 because of a power shortage.

The Power Authority, in its annual report, envisioned not only the dimming of Broadway's bright lights and famous electric signs, but said that power rationing in upstate manufacturing areas would be necessary soon because of the lack of electricity for war industrials.

U. S. Minister Buried in Iraq

Bagdad, Feb. 2 (U.P.).—High Iraqi officials and all members of the Diplomatic Corps marched today in the funeral procession for Paul Knabenshue, 59, United States Minister to Iraq, who died at his legation yesterday.

Officers of the Iraqi army, and cavalry and infantry from the Royal Guard participated in the procession, marching behind Knabenshue's flag-draped coffin as it was carried to a cemetery on a gun carriage.

Members of the American military mission to Iraq and all members of the British colony participated.

Britain Bombed, Nazis Lose Plane

London, Feb. 2 (AP).—An enemy bomber was shot down into the sea off the east coast of England today, a British communique said.

Bombs were dropped at two points on the east coast and at a place in east Scotland. Some damage was done and there were a number of casualties, the air ministry and ministry of home security said. In offensive patrols over the French coast, an enemy bomber was shot down and one British fighter was lost, the air ministry announced.

Amboina Silent; Planes Over Baugka; Batavia Imperiled

By the Associated Press

Batavia, Feb. 2.—The threat to this Netherlands East Indies capital increased today as Japanese planes hovered over Bangka Island in the Java Sea only 220 miles north of here.

This aerial vanguard of invasion apparently was based on Dutch West Borneo, where it was concluded that Japanese troops had seized Pontianak, the big port city only 440 airline miles from Batavia.

Bangka, noted for its rich tin deposits, is off the Sumatra coast and would serve as an intermediate stepping stone for a direct Japanese onslaught against Java, seat of the United Nations command.

"From unconfirmed sources," the Dutch communique said, "it has been concluded that Pontianak has been occupied by the Japanese."

The Dutch announced last week that vital installations and equipment at Pontianak had been destroyed after Japanese troops landed at Pemangkat, 85 miles to the north, and began pushing south along the coastal road.

Possession of Pontianak gave the Japanese an important base to raid Allied shipping in the Java Sea between Batavia and Singapore to the northwest.

Presumably the eastern arm of a Japanese thrust toward Java still was held up in the Balik Papan area on Macassar Strait, where combined Dutch-American action exacted a toll of 32 Japanese ships last week.

The situation on Amboina Island, site of a big Dutch naval base between Celebes and New Guinea off the Australian north mainland, apparently was critical. Today's communique said no further word had been received from either Amboina, or the defenders fighting in the Kendari region of eastern Celebes.

The Tokyo radio, which announced the seizure of Pontianak yesterday, also said additional troops were landed on Amboina.

The Dutch said guerilla warfare on the Minahassa Peninsula in northeastern Celebes was continuing and reported scattered Japanese air attacks.

One raid on Poso, in central Celebes, killed one person and wounded four. A second attack on the native quarter of one small Dutch island killed four persons and wounded several.

A Netherlands flying boat was declared to have shot down a Japanese fighter in a skirmish in which the Dutch naval craft was damaged slightly.

tack "in considerable strength."

A British military commentator said Gen. Rommel was feeling his way forward "in the usual German manner, tapping each part of the front and trying to find a weak spot through which he could push right through."

British mobile columns clashed with the enemy northeast of Msus and captured some prisoners and four vehicles. The fighting apparently was general in the rugged Jebel el Akdar region.

Return to an eastern Cyrenaica base by the Seventh Indian Infantry Brigade, which had remained behind to cover the Bengasi evacuation, was a cheerful note in the communique, which also noted that engineering units left behind to carry out the demolition program probably had been unable to effect a successful withdrawal.

German and Italian tank formations, supported by motorized infantry, stood between the Seventh Brigade at Bengasi and the desolate regions to the southwest, but they boldly broke through, inflicting casualties and taking prisoners as they went.

They then marched approximately 200 miles through desert territory in which enemy columns were operating, and reached an eastern base with fighting personnel virtually intact.

Central High Graduate Dies In Coast Guard Action at Sea

Clifford Alexander Lindsay, 21, native Washingtonian and Central High School graduate, has lost his life in action at sea, fighting with the United States Coast Guard, it was learned here yesterday.

His father, James Lindsay, Washington Navy Yard employe, and his sister, Miss Catherine I. Lindsay, live at 424 Twelfth Street Southeast. A brother, James Lindsay, jr., is with the Standard Oil fleet.

Lindsay, who would have been 22 in March, joined the Coast Guard a year ago and held the rank of fireman, first class.

At Central High School, where he was graduated in 1939, he won a place on the rifle team. During the recent Christmas holidays he paid his family a visit. The notification of his death came to the family in a wire from Rear Admiral Russell R. Waesche, Coast Guard commandant.

Reds Claim Arctic Successes

In the Barents Sea Soviet warships sank three enemy transports totaling 8000 tons, and in the week ended January 31 the Russians destroyed 160 planes compared to their own losses of 39 aircraft, the Russian announcement said. Eleven more German planes were destroyed Sunday.

London military sources said the Russians were smashing forward around Rzhev, northwest of Moscow, and Kharkov in the Ukraine, and hammering at the German wedge north of the Sea of Azov, with spearheads forcing the Nazis into huge pockets.

The reports said the Russians had reached the north-south secondary railway line between Rzhev and Vyazma, which is about 120 miles west of Moscow, with the result that the former stronghold is virtually isolated with only a German rearguard there.

(The fall of Dnieperopetrovsk, site of the huge Soviet power development on the big bend of the Dnieper, is expected as a result of the offensive south of Kharkov which is now about 30 miles from the river, London quarters said. The Russians in retreat last fall blew up the Dnieperopetracsk Dam.)

Counterattacks Repulsed

Specifically, the Russians claimed the occupation of the town of "N" and the destruction of more than 1200 officers and men on the Southwesern Front, where the Red army has jabbed deeply toward the Dnieper bend.

Desperate counterattacks by trapped German units were repulsed, it was said, and Red air fleet operations resulted in the killing of 800 more Germans.

On the front west of Moscow other dispatches said the village of Kondorovo had been liberated and a score of nearby settlements freed.

Northwest of Moscow, beyond Kalinin, other Russian units wrecked a German airport, blew up 20 tons of bombs and captured the village "K."

Dneiper Salient Widened

Moscow, Feb. 2 (U.P.).—Marshal Semyon Timoshenko's army of the Urkaine, driving toward the Dnieper bend in forced marches through deep snow, was reported to have expanded its salient southward with the capture of Gavrilovka, railroad town 30 miles east of Lozovaya.

A Russian vanguard captured Lozovaya, only 65 miles from the Dnieper and 70 miles straight south of Kharkov, four days ago, and has been reported advancing steadily ever since.

The capture of Gavrilovka gave Timoshenko another strong anchor for the salient driven more than 60 miles into the German lines and increased the threat to the Axis armies along the Sea of Azov, whose communications already had been shaken badly.

the American people has been 'where is the fleet?'

"This question was answered in part yesterday by the splendid achievements of our ships and planes in the attacks on enemy concentrations in the Marshall and Gilbert Islands.

"Thus your fleet is busy—every moment of every day and night, across the vast reaches of the Pacific; specially in those areas where it can the most effectively harass the enemy and contribute to our own security.

"Let me remind you that the Pacific Ocean encompasses almost 70 million square miles. To wage war across this trackless battleground—stretching across 160 degrees of longitude and from one polar region to another—is a gigantic task for any fleet or combination of fleets.

"But I can attest that every ship, every plane, every officer and man of the Pacific fleet, afloat, aloft and ashore, is being utilized to the fullest extent, both to safeguard America and to bring the war to the enemy's front door."

It was Admiral Nimitz's first comment on the attack in the southwest Pacific in which a large number of enemy auxiliary vessels were sunk and many planes destroyed.

Japs Used Balloons In Macassar Strait

flights. One large warship—we think it was a battleship, but things happened so fast we could not make sure—was sunk, a heavy cruiser was set on fire and was listing sharply when we last saw it, and another cruiser, four transports and a destroyer were fired.

"The enemy set up a terrific anti-aircraft barrage and for awhile it looked as if the Jap navy was celebrating some sort of an occasion with a superfireworks display.

"The Japs carried an elaborate balloon barrage, which rose about 9000 feet above the decks of their larger ships."

The first officer slad he saw one of the Dutch 660-pound bombs hit the large warship amidships. "There was a tremendous explosion and a thick cloud of black smoke rose into the air.

"When our aircraft shot out of the clouds the Jap destroyers began to scuttle about their charges like frightened water beetles, but we came so unexpectedly that they didn't have a chance to escape."

The Japanese fire was very poor at first, but improved later, the officers said.

Jap Carrier Arrives

On the second day, the officers related, they had no difficulty in locating the armada and they sank a large transport, left a troopship with a bad list, hit a destroyer and shot four Nipponese planes out of the air.

The third day the convoy had reached Balik Papan and had landed troops and the only antiaircrft fire to greet the airmen was from a few shore batteries that had been put ashore.

A Japanese aircraft carrier had arrived on the scene, however, and it put 20 of its zero fighters into the air. In a spirited fight four of them were shot down and another spotter was sent crashing with the loss of a single Dutch bomber.

Despite the interference the airmen said they hit and probably sank a cruiser and fired a transport.

"The next day American planes and warships and a Dutch submarine joined in the attack," one of the officers said, "with the result that after four successive days a total of 32 Japanese ships were sunk, fired or heavily damaged, no less than 16 enemy planes downed, while the Allies lost only 1 plane."

Destroyer Sinks U-Boat Off Azores

Horta, Azore Islands, Feb. 2 (U.P.).—Destroyers of unknown nationality sank a German submarine at dawn today a few miles south of Pico Island, not far from here.

Explosions were heard clearly ashore. One German survivor reached Pico, one of the largest of Portugal's Azores.

Raids Start Fires In Singapore

apocryphal day of the foundation of the Japanese state.)

"Air observers," the British command said in its afternoon communique, "report considerable enemy movements southward on the mainland.

"Enemy air activity over Singapore has increased throughout the last 24 hours. Some damage was caused but military casualties have been slight."

Water Reported Adequate

The supply of the greatest of all essentials for a long siege—water—was said to be adequate, in spite of the loss of the mainland reservoirs. The heavy rains of the weekend had raised the level in reservoirs and wells which already were nearly full.

The British news agency Reuters reported from Batavia that the Singapore naval base on Johore Strait was no longer being used, since it was in sight of a range of mainland hills affording ideal position and cover for Japanese artillery. Three of Singapore's air bases were said also to be similarly situated and virtually useless.

Nevertheless, the dispatch pointed out that if Singapore and the naval base and air fields were held, they would in time "provide the nucleus of an offensive center."

Before Singapore was finally lost, said this dispatch, the torch of the scorched earth policy would be pitilessly applied.

In event of such a disaster, the island in Japanese hands would remain for some itme within the bombing range of Allied aricraft, it was added, but the Allies probably would be forced back to a line on Java and would have to depend on the south Java ports for their supplies—via India and South Africa and Australia and America.

Guns May Be Turned

London, Feb. 2 (U.P.).—A London military commentator said today Singapore's coastal guns, monster weapons ranging up to 18-inchers, which had been planted at strategic points on the island for the primary purpose of repelling attacks from the sea, might have been wheeled around to counter the assault from the Malayan mainland.

The spokesman expressed doubt that all of the Singapore defenses had been aimed at the sea, saying that "no doubt the designers considered every sort of attack."

heavy bombs.

All of the big, four-engined American craft returned to their base undamaged, the Army said.

Yesterday morning's Army communique telling of the repulse of the latest heavy attack on MacArthur's weary troops, significantly made no mention of enemy air action.

Reports from the Philippines have indicated that the Tokyo high command has withdrawn considerable air force it sent to Luzon. The American and Filipino antiaircraft gunners and fighter pilots have shot down about 150 enemy planes.

Japan's Best Troops Mastered

Reporting that the enemy thrusts on the west coast of Bataan have now been "completely mastered," Gen. MacArthur said that they were attempted by special Japanese troops.

These troops, the "Tatori" are somewhat similar to the British commandos and are all picked men specially trained for dangerous missions.

In his report, MacArthur said:

"They resisted with the courage which is characteristic of Japanese troops but at the end were glad to surrender." They are being treated with the respect and consideration which their gallantry so well merits."

The significance of the term "Tatori" was not known to military men here. Literally translated it means "big chicken." It is, however, a common Japanese surname and the troops may be named for an army leader who organized them.

Following are the texts of the Army communiques telling of the action:

War Department Communique No. 88

1. Philippine theater: During the past 24 hours the enemy attacked on the right and left of our troops in Bataan. These attacks were repulsed with heavy Japanese losses. This action was a continuance of the fighting which has been in progress during the past few days.

"Attacks were launched on the east and west sectors by the Sixteenth and Sixty-fifth Japanese divisions, under command of Lieut. Gen. Nara. These assaults were coordinated and timed to take place simultaneously. Head-long thrusts were made on the west coast, aimed at what the enemy mistakenly thought to be our flank and rear.

"Picked groups known as Tatori executed simultaneous attacks at several points along the west coast line, like the fingers of a clawing hand. Captured aerial maps showed the Japanese plan and the urgent character of the mission. There was savage fighting in the underbrush. Our infantry, supported by artillery and mortar fire, forced the invaders back to the coast. Those who attempted flight by sea were drowned. The others were destroyed or captured.

"In the east sector the Japanese Sixty-fifth Division attempted a frontal attack and an envelopment in the Pilar area. The frontal attack was made by the 142d Japanese infantry. A simultaneous atempt at envelopment was made by the Japanese 141st and 122d regiments of infantry. A simultaneous attempt at stopped by our artillery fire before it got well under way. The envelopment was repulsed with heavy losses to the Japanese.

"With reference to the fighting on the west coast, Gen. MacArthur said:

"'All enemy thrusts on the west coast have now been completely mastered. The enemy troops employed in this desperate venture were his best. They were shock units especially trained and selected. They have now been entirely destroyed. They resisted with the courage which is characteristic of Japanese troops but at the end were glad to surrender. They are being treated with the respect and consideration which their gallantry so well merits.'

"2. There is nothing to report from other areas."

War Department Communique No. 89

"1. Southwest Pacific: Several air raids on enemy shipping and air fields were carried out by small formations of heavy American Army bombers of the Flying Fortress type.

"Our bombers raided the Japanese air fields at Kuala Lumpur and Kuantan in Malaya. On account of poor visibility it was impossible to determine the results of these attacks. Our planes returned to their base undamaged.

"Enemy fighter planes intercepted four of our bombers which were en route to attack Japanese shipping in the harbor of Balik Papan on the Island of Borneo. In the ensuing fight, nine enemy planes were shot down. One of our bombers was lost.

"2. There is nothing to report from other areas."

LINE MOVES DOWN—A frontal attack and envelopment attempted yesterday by the Japs in the area of Pilar (arrow) was stopped by Gen. Douglas MacArthur's men. An assault on the west coast of Bataan by picked Japanese troops known as "Tatori" was turned back and the attackers driven into the sea. All the Japs were killed or captured. The War Department announced that the American-Filipino line is now probably half way down the peninsula

26½ Billions Voted Navy by Senate

Conferees to Meet Today on 6½ Billion Addition to House Bill

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

In two hours and three minutes, the Senate yesterday voted the Navy 26½ billion dollars for the aerial and sea-going weapons of a two-ocean war.

Senate and House conferees this afternoon will meet to consider the Senate's addition of more than 6½ billion dollars to the House version of the biggest naval appropriation bill of all time.

Drafted to help solve the predicament of a nation fighting in two oceans with a one-ocean navy—a situation Secretary of the Navy Knox told the Senate was "critical"—the measure would appropriate, or authorize contracts for construction of $8,206,760,385 worth of new ships and $6,740,581,470 worth of new airplanes, armored and armed for fighting.

For fighting ships of virtually all types—excepting battleships—and for 25,063 airplanes, most of them combat types, the measure would devote 60 per cent of its total of $26,494,265,474.

The bill went through the Senate with only one change in the measure approved Saturday by the Appropriations Committee. That was a relatively minor amendment, proposed by Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, which would remove existing limitations on the number of "flying admirals" entitled to be paid above the regular rates.

Debate Stresses Sacrifice

Debate on the measure, marked by the observation of Senator McNary, of Oregon, the minority leader, that its total had been raised at the rate of one billion dollars a day since the House passed the bill last Tuesday, emphasized the Senate's desire to make the country aware of the sacrifices involved in tremendous expenditures.

"This is a clarion call by the Congress to the American people to endure supreme financial and other hardships to achieve total victory out of total war," declared Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, chairman of the subcommittee in charge of the bill.

"The situation with respect to both oceans is critical." Knox was revealed to have told the subcommittee, whose secret sessions were made public yesterday.

Can't Expect Quick Results

"We are trying to fight a two-ocean war with a one-ocean navy, thus far, and it is going to take time to build up our strength," he said. "We must not expect quick results. It is a problem largely of holding and doing the best we can with what we have, and putting every ounce of pressure in to get more as fast as possible."

Knox stated that the effort to keep open communications between the United States, Great Britain and Russia "is absorbing the attention of a considerable part of our naval forces," while on the Pacific supplies have to be transported through 7000 miles of enemy-infested ocean.

For 2 Oceans

New Agency To Rush Navy Construction

The Navy has reorganized its procurement and production machinery to speed up construction of its two-ocean fleet.

A new agency, known as the Office of Procurement and Material, has been set up to coordinate all naval buying and, as the Navy contact organization with the War Production Board, carry out production policies laid down by the WPB. Previously, procurement and production has been handled by the various departmental bureaus.

Rear Admiral Samuel M. Robinson, who was put in charge of the lagging Navy shipbuilding program 2½ years ago and materially stepped up warship construction, heads the new agency. He will have the rank of vice admiral.

Succeeding Admiral Robinson as chief of the bureau of ships is Rear Admiral Alexander H. Van Keuren. Van Keuren, assistant chief of the bureau of ships for the past two years, was nominated yesterday for the post.

The new procurement-production office will have three principal divisions, all of which will be headed by civilians. They are:

Production division—In charge of Joseph W. Powell, former shipbuilding company official, who has been a special assistant to Secretary of the Navy Knox for some months.

Purchases division—In charge of Frank M. Folsom, now a member of War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson's staff.

Resources Planning and Statistics Division—In charge of Donald Belcher, American Telephone & Telegraph Co. official.

Admiral Robinson, a native of Texas, was graduated from Annapolis in 1903. He saw service overseas during World War I with the Allied grand fleet. From 1931 to 1935 he was engineer in chief of the Navy and chief of the Bureau of Engineering. When the Bureau of Engineering and the Bureau of Construction and Repair were informally consolidated in 1939, he was recalled to that post and made coordinator of shipbuilding.

MacArthur Stand Amazes Dutch

San Francisco, Feb. 2 (AP).—The "amazing Americans and Filipinos" defending the Batan Peninsula in the Philippines under Gen. Douglas MacArthur against the Japanese were lauded by an official Batavia radio commentator heard here today by the C. B. S. short-wave listening station.

"The staying power of these amazing Americans and Filipinos is demonstrated by the success (today) in a very clear way," the commentator said.

"One looks for the explanation of the wonder that is taking place on Luzon without finding any solution for it other than the immeasurable will power of a number of men, who, under the inspiring leadership of a great general, would rather die than surrender a piece of soil entrusted to them."

6 Shot in Paris, 100 Are Exiled For Bombings

By the Associated Press

Vichy, Feb. 2.—A new outbreak of violence against German occupation forces in Paris has resulted in the execution of Six Parisian youths by Nazi firing squads and exile to eastern Europe for 100 others, Lieut.-Gen. Ernest von Schaumburg, military commander in the occupied capital, announced tonight.

This latest of a long series of repressive measures by the Nazis to curb anti-German activities followed at least four bombings and two shootings in which occupation troops were the targets.

Von Schaumburg's announcement described the youths as Jews and Communists.

Simultaneously, it was learned here that two Walloon Belgians were executed at Mons recently on order of the German military court there. They were Raymond Soupart and Henri Jouvenois.

Soupart was charged with having twice committed acts of violence against German troops, engaging in activity in favor of the enemy and illegal possession of arms. Jouvenois was accused of communistic activity.

In the unoccupied zone of France it was announced today that a French woman had been executed for treason in Algeria January 28 after a military trial. Details were not given.

Fires in Oslo Reported As Quisling Takes Over

London, Feb. 2 (AP).—The Oslo radio reported tonight that fires broke out at both the city's east and west railroad stations a few hours after the induction yesterday of Maj. Vidkun Quisling as the Nazis' puppet premier for Norway.

The fire at the east station, it was added, was not controlled until this morning.

Several persons were said to have been injured.

Polish circles in London reported 22 Polish Jews were executed recently by the German Gestapo at Warsaw and Kielce for "abandonment of their Ghetto."

The Moscow radio broadcast a roundabout report quoting Swiss advices of anti-German outbreaks in Italy and stonings of newly arrived Nazi troops at Florence.

This account, unconfirmed from any other quarter—said further that Italian garrisons in Sicily had been withdrawn following clashes with Germans.

El Salvador Gets Lend-Lease Aid

Secretary of State Hull said yesterday the United States had signed a lend-lease agreement with the Republic of El Salvador. The amount involved was not announced by Hull, but informed sources estimated it at $1,100,000.

Hull also revealed that negotiations for a lend-lease agreement with Ecuador were near completion.

Belleau Wood Veteran Joins Marines Again—as 'Graybeard'

"LEATHERNECK" REENLISTS IN NEW CLASS—Orders in hand, Nathan Weltz, 43, of Miami, Fla., is congratulated by First Sergt. Julian M. Ashley as being the first man accepted in Class 4, of the Marine Corps

By Scott Hart
Post Staff Writer

The Germans shot the muscles from his left arm in the rocks and thickets of Belleau Woods in 1918 and 24 intervening years established a prominent waistline, but Nathan Weltz, now 43, will pin an eagle, globe and anchor back on his hat again this week.

He was the first "graybeard" volunteer here for Class 4, United States Marine Corps Reserve, a class to be filled with former Marines and others over 30 and under 50. After he passed the physical examination yesterday he returned to the sergeant to say:

"I know you're glad to get rid of me!"

Weltz is a bookdealer in Miami, Fla., where he lives at 216 Northeast Second Avenue. He hadn't seen a snow in 12 years, was content with warm weather, bookselling and the remembering of his wounds.

But peace left him when the war came.

He had been here four weeks arguing with the sergeant to take him in. Finally his place came, among the 6000 to be taken in Class 4. And around the recruiting station at 949 Ninth Street Northwest he set the people to saying again yesterday, "once a Marine always one."

There was another one there, sitting in a lobby chair. This was David E. Kime, of 128 V Street Northeast, a man near 60. He fought in the Boxer Uprising.

"I just sit here," he said, "liking to watch them enlist and I wish I weren't too old."

The sergeant said: "The older ones have been coming back."

The last action Weltz had known was on June 15, 1918, when, as a member of the Forty-ninth Company, Fifth Marine Regiment, he got his wounds in the Germans' last World War drive on Paris.

Second man to be taken yesterday was Gilbert H. Crim, 41, of 6615 Twenty-fifth Street South, Arlington, a printer, who went to France at 16 with the Thirteenth Marine Regiment under Gen. Smedley Butler in 1918. He has three children now. With Weltz, he was sent to the Washington Navy Yard in the afternoon. They were told to report back at 8:30 a. m. today to get their uniforms—Marines again.

Since January 29 12 men have applied for Class 4 and 6 have passed the physical examination. Weltz and Crim were sworn in yesterday.

Members of the force to which they now belong will guard naval shore bases within the continental United States, relieving Marines between 17 and 30 for combat duty. Physical requirements obviously are relaxed for "the graybeards."

They must, of course, "be of high caliber and responsible men of good standing in their communities."

Whenever practicable they will be permitted to select their place of duty, provided it is within the naval district where they enlist. Assignment will be to the nearest station when no choice is specified. Veterans of the World War will be reappointed to their highest former enlisted rank, not above sergeant and not lower than private, first class.

None will be accepted in the class who is entirely fit for combat. Serviceable feet, legs and heart, and good character, with age between 30 and 50, are the general requirements for that.

Yanks or Filipinos, They Fight as One

By Clark Lee
Associated Press Staff Writer

With Gen. MacArthur on the Bataan Peninsula, Jan. 30 (Delayed). Grimy and blood-stained Americans fight and die day by day beside their Filipino comrades, and the closest comradeship prevails on the battlefield and in quarters.

As prototypes of the thousands of heroes making an iron stand against an entire Japanese army, consider the exploits of such soldiers as Private Jose Francisco, of the Philippine army; Lieut. John Smith, of the United States Army, and Sergt. Gregorio Villareal, of the Philippine Scouts. (Not their real names.)

Everyone on the peninsula is under fire at times, because there are no safe areas in this war, but men like these are actually in the firing lines manning machine guns, tossing grenades and ducking shrapnel, air bombs and strafers.

Until September, Francisco worked in terraced rice fields in his upland province. He was called to the Army, put in uniform and given a rifle and brief military training.

He was at Lingayen Bay when the Japanese landed and was scared stiff by the sound of American 155s, never having heard anything louder than an automobile backfire before. He was still scared during the retreat into Bataan, but he has settled down and is a real fighter.

Francisco is courteous and really believes the Americans are his big brothers. He looks to them for guidance leadership and protection.

He gets all three from Lieut. Smith, in private life a lawyer, newspaperman or a salesman.

Smith is only a few years out of college where he had R. O. T. C. training. He was called to active duty a year ago. Smith fights beside Francisco behind trees and barbed wire barricades.

They share the same fox holes during air raids. Smith never thinks of his personal safety. His friends have died at Lingayen and in southern Luzon, and they are dying on Bataan gallantly and unquestioningly.

Sergt. Villareal is every inch a soldier. His father served under Capt. John J. Pershing nearly 40 years ago, and Villareal as a sergeant of the Philippine Scouts is a man of the highest standing among the Filipinos. When told to defend a position he sticks and fights, regardless of the odds, until he is given new orders.

Speed Urged on Big Loan to China

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Swift clearance through Congress of a 500-million-dollar loan authorization for "economic and financial assistance" to China last night was requested by leaders on the urgent recommendation of President Roosevelt.

Immediate hearings were ordered before the House Foreign Relations Committee in executive session, with heads of five Government departments called to testify today.

"China needs the money, and this is a mark of good faith on our part," Speaker Rayburn told reporters.

The President dispatched letters to both Rayburn and Vice President Wallace asking assistance "going beyond in amount and different in form from such aid as Congress has already authorized."

Bloom Offers Bill

"I believe that such additional assistance would serve to strengthen China's position as regards both her internal economy and her capacity in general to function with great military effectiveness in our common effort," said the President.

A bill introduced by Chairman Sol Bloom of the House Foreign Affairs Committee authorized the Secretary of the Treasury with the approval of the President "to loan or extend credit or give other financial aid to China" up to the $500,000,000.

Although details of the loans were not disclosed, it was indicated that the funds would not take the form of direct war aid, or be used to finance purchase of guns, tanks or planes as was the case with the credit advanced in the past.

Britain Also to Make Loan

The White House request coincided with announcement by the foreign office in London that Britain would lend China up to 50 million pounds ($200,000,000) for war purposes. The British also are willing to make available to China under a lend-lease arrangement "all the munitions and military equipment which it is possible for them to supply," the London statement said.

The two loans would help Chiang Kai-shek to fight the growing menace in China of inflation, to feed, pay and supply his army and to bolster civilian morale.

Further, they were regarded as a significant token of Anglo-American determination to conduct an all-out war in the Pacific and support China to the limit. It was the second recent indication by the President of that intent.

Cabinet Members to Testify

Called by Chairman Bloom to testify on the loan authorization were Secretary of State Hull, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, Secretary of War Stimson and Federal Loan Administrator Jones. At a conference Saturday with Morgenthau and Jones, leaders discussed the measure, but details were withheld pending today's hearing. Speaker Rayburn said the resolution will be called up immediately after it is reported by the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

The resolution suggested by the President and immediately introduced in the House stressed that "the defense of China is of the greatest possible importance" and paid tribute to the Government which "has for more than four years valiantly resisted the forces of Japanese aggression."

Kelly Orders Buttons For Senate Race

Chicago, Feb. 2 (INS).—An order for campaign buttons urging the election of Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago to the United States Senate has been placed with a novelty manufacturing company, the Chicago Herald-American stated today.

The information was taken as additional evidence that Mayor Kelly, who recently conferred with President Roosevelt in Washington, will seek the Democratic Senatorial nomination. It has long been rumored that he would enter the race, but he has not yet confirmed the reports.

The nominations will be determined in primary elections next April.

New York Publicist Wanted In Nazi Probe Is Missing

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Missing and "badly wanted" by the special grand jury on Axis agents last night was William Griffin, editor of the weekly paper, New York Enquirer.

Grave concern for the missing editor was expressed by Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney and Edward J. Hickley, jr. He is the second important witness to disappear on the eve of questioning by the Department of Justice propaganda squad.

Ralph Townsend, Scribner's commentator writer, vanished from his lake Geneva, Wis., home the morning a summons went out for him and a Nation-wide search failed to locate him. He reappeared after Pearl Harbor and last week was indicted as a Japanese agent, posting $5000 bond in Milwaukee yesterday.

Last July, a key witness against the German news service, Transocean, was assassinated in Colombia when about to take a plane for Washington.

Enquirer a Client, Too

Transocean was convicted in the District Court of failure to register as a German propaganda agency. One of its few paying clients—most papers getting the service for almost nothing—was Griffin's Enquirer.

This paper in 1940 issued a special edition advocating the nomination of Representative Hamilton Fish for President. The article was signed by Prescott Dennett, who ran isolationist committees in Washington as a front for his extensive propaganda mailing enterprises.

From Dennett's headquarters last September 19, a House truck dispatched by Fish's secretary, George Hill, 45, spirited away a load of mailbags full of franked envelopes. Hill had some of them placed in a storeroom used by Fish. Justice F. Dickinson Letts is due to sentence Hill Friday to 2 to 20 years in prison for perjury, in denying his part in the mailbag affair and in denying that he knew George Sylvester Viereck.

The grand jurors charged in an indictment that Viereck, the ace Nazi propagandist in America, financed Dennett to obtain the advantage of mailing his propaganda under Congressional frank. Hill bought huge quantities of this material and Dennett mailed it.

Viereck Trial Set February 16

Justice Letts yesterday set February 16 for Viereck's trial on three charges of concealing his propaganda activity on Capitol Hill—which included writing speeches delivered in the Senate by the late Ernest Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota.

Justice Letts overruled motions of Viereck's lawyers—Emil Morosini, jr., and Daniel F. Cohalen, jr., New York—for indefinite postponement or removal of the trial to another city. Justice Letts denied also the plea that Viereck's case be sent back for trial before Justice T. Alan Goldsborough, who was accused in a sworn statement of "prejudice against the Government."

Justice Letts also refused to forbid Government agents and officers to talk to newspapermen about the Viereck case, as was asked by Viereck's lawyers.

The justice will make these rulings formally on February 16, when counsel for both sides are in court.

The Viereck case will follow closely the trial of Laura Ingalls, woman flier and isolationist speaker, who is due to face a jury next Monday on an indictment charging that she failed to report that the German Embassy paid for her efforts. Appearing against Miss Ingalls is Special Prosecutor Neil Andrews.

Townsend and his two American and one Japanese codefendants will probably be arraigned in the District Court next Monday. Presenting the charges of criminal conspiracy and unregistered Japanese agency against them are Special Prosecutors Albert E. Arent and Arthur B. Caldwell.

promised every effort to keep feedstuffs at reasonable levels. To guard farmers from unnecessarily high production costs, the OPA will take steps to hold down the prices of things that the farmer buys, the statement said.

Senator Lucas (Democrat), of Illinois, predicted a legislative move prohibiting the Commodity Credit Corporation from selling any of its stocks of grain or cotton below "parity." He said 75 million bushels of corn already had been sold by the corporation at a below-parity rate.

The Henderson-Wickard statement called on American consumers to "do their part" by not hoarding and by buying commodities which are plentiful in supply.

Hoarding Deplored

"There is no occasion for hoarding of food," they said. "Supplies of most staple foods are at record or near record levels. Families who hoarded in the past were simply misguided. Now they are both misguided and unpatriotic, for such buying upsets markets and encourages inflationary price advances. It should be a point of pride with every good American not to hoard or waste food."

"Preventing war-time inflation will minimize the danger of another postwar deflation, and so contribute to winning the peace," the two officials said. "If inflation is to be controlled, it is now especially important that effective positive steps be taken to stabilize the cost of living."

Music Hours' Fine Recital Wins Praise

By Ray C. B. Brown

National Music League presents the PM Musical Hour on Monday afternoon in Pierce Hall. Artists: William Gephart, barytone; Bertha Melnik, pianist; New Manhattan String Quartet, Program of music by Palestrina, Gabrieli, Peri, Monteverdi, Bull, Farnby, Byrd, Agricola, Senfl, Stoltzer, Rosseter and Dowland.

Beginning a weekly series of concerts reviewing the course of music since 1600, the National Music League presented the PM Musical Hour yesterday afternoon in Pierce Hall. If the programs are all as interesting as the first one and as ably performed by the staff of young American artists chosen for this educational course, the patrons will be well rewarded. The sponsoring organization is placing the entire emphasis upon music and none at all upon the personalities of the musicians, a policy most heartily to be commended. The public is already over-supplied with recitals by famous and advertised artists whose programs offer nothing but familiar music.

Yesterday's program started with Palestrina in the aspect not of a choral writer but as a composer of chamber music. The piece was a ricercar or motet for four instrumental voices, and was followed by two short canzoni of similar voicing by Giovanni Gabrieli, the teacher of Heinrich Schuetz and Michael Praetorius. This charming group of pieces, well played by the New Manhattan Quartet, closed with a pavanne and gaillarde by an unknown Belgian composer of the sixteenth century. Why is it, by the way, that an unidentified piece of instrumental music is always labeled "anonymous," while unidentified vocal music is called a folk song? Every folk song was composed by an individual originally, and should also be designated as anonymous, unless the composer's name has fortunately been preserved, as in the case of Franz Xaver Gruber's "Holy Night."

English music of the Elizabethan period was sampled by Bertha Melnik and William Gephart, Miss Melnik played a jig by John Bull, Giles Farnaby's "A Dream" and William Byrd's variations on "The Carman's Whistle." Mr. Gephart sang Philip Rosseter's "When Laura Smiles," John Dowland's "I Saw My Lady Weep" and the anonymous "Love Will Find Out the Way." The songs were rare items of delightful flavor.

Accompanied by string quartet and piano, Mr. Gephart, who used his barytone voice with taste and sensitiveness of phrasing, offered an aria from the first extant opera, Jacopo Peri's "Euridice," and another from Monteverdi's "Orfeo." These were moving arias in the pure form of dramatic expression, before the introduction of fioriture for display of vocal agility.

He was also heard in three early songs in German: "Eine feste Burg" by Martin Sore, alias Martin Agricola, of Magdeburg; "Es jagt ein Jaeger geschwinde" by Ludwig Senfl, the Swiss composer noted for his "social songs;" and "Toenig ein Herr" by Thomas Stoltzer, choirmaster for King Louis of Hungary.

not a thing out of the way."

"It is the hardest job in the District," Mason added.

In announcing Lodge's reappointment to the $3000 a year position, Mason said he had instructed Assistant Corporation Counsel Vernon West to prepare special legislation and regulation revisions which would "tighten up" local ABC laws.

Among them, said Mason, will be an amendment to the law prohibiting retail dealers from buying directly from factories. This action, he said, will force dealers to purchase through local wholesalers and "cut out price-cutting competition."

He indicated that other changes designed to strengthen enforcement of District liquor laws would be forthcoming under a program to be mapped by himself, West and Lodge.

In further defending the reappointment, Mason revealed Lodge had the indorsement of "every Methodist minister in town, some 20 Representatives, a dozen Senators and two Episcopal clergymen."

Two other members of the ABC Board—Mrs. Agnes Mason and William Meredith—still have about three years each to serve.

Lodge was named chairman in March, 1939, filling the unexpired term of George W. Offutt, who died. He is 43 and holds degrees of LL. B., LL. M. and B. A. from George Washington UUniversity and the National Law School.

Lodge lives with his wife and two sons at 4900 Forty-seventh Street Northwest.

New regulations which became effective yesterday requiring some 6000 local holders of liquor licenses to be fingerprinted when renewing their permits will be carried out as rapidly as possible, Mason promised.

He said extra personnel would be added to the police identification division in order to facilitate the work. Maj. Edward J. Kelly, police superintendent, earlier said the job would be "impossible" to tackle unless the extra workers were added.

President Cancels Press Conference

President Roosevelt yesterday canceled his regular press conference scheduled for this afternoon. The next conference normally should be held Friday at 10:30 a. m.

Mr. Roosevelt also directed that no appointments be arranged for him yesterday.

Parasite Purge Enters the Fourth Day

Government needs no boost from a paid clique now."

One woman wrote to say she certainly "stuck her neck out" when she took in a Government girl as a boarder, just because she had been told it was patriotic to share her home with one.

"She is a little girl from the West," the landlady said, "and I know from her it is absolutely true Government girls go without breakfast." This young lady got sick and called the office nurse, who told her she had to have breakfast . . . She came to me with the tale and I sent her to the corner cafeteria, but did she go? She went out and bought oranges and cereal and came back to my kitchen, although I had assured her I could not serve her meals.

"Don't get the idea she is broke. She shops every day, but I haven't received a cent. Yet, I can't put her out. So what is a parasite?"

Mrs. M. E. May, who lives in the Albemarle Apartments, said she and her daughter, Marjorie May, are ready to do all they can to help win the war and will follow the President's suggestion about giving their space to others.

"My daughter is a registered nurse and is going to join the Army Nurse Corps. I will go back to New York, where I used to live. Our apartment has a living room, bedroom, kitchen and bath, and all the rooms are large," she said.

"Why not send one or two of the directors of the Office of Civilian Defense away?" suggested one of the Secret Six's correspondents.

Several natives wrote in to say they would take some of the jobs now being handled by outsiders, and be glad to get them.

Two women drawing alimony and keeping their children in school here "when they might as well be back where they came from" were mentioned in two different letters.

Lobbyists and "particularly former Congressmen who sell their influence high" were mentioned by numerous correspondents as "parasites we could do without."

Honorary Parasite

One girl wrote to ask whether she could become an honorary parasite. "All my life I have tried to emulate the mistletoe or the barnacle," she said, "but have never been able to qualify entirely because of having to earn my own tax money."

A Republican said to him it seemed a parasite is any of "these Democrats who have a chance of staying here 12 years when the longest we ever got to stay was eight."

"If you want expressions from readers," one irate inhabitant from the Middle West wrote, "you'll get them. Parasites in Washington? Out in the United States they've never regarded Washington as full of anything else!"

Interested Resident said:

"So now we are threatened with expulsion from our houses so that thousands of unnecessary workers may be brought in who pay no taxes, do not contribute toward the welfare and merely clog the wheels of an overburdened Government."

Poetic Protest Of a Capitalite

By Elizabeth Henney

The question is, it seems to me—
Who're Parasites—who ain't?
A question that appears to be Enough to jolt a saint.

But there's another angle yet
To moving out of town.
Why throw our own folk out to get
Some "furriners" around?

Who are these people anyway
They're bringing into town?
Are they so much more skillful than
The ones we've got around?

The folks with homes on these here sites
Are good at paying taxes.
Let's "Workers" make of Parasites
And bury all our axes!

Curtin Asks Close Ties With Britain

Divide, Survive

American Breaks Axis Desert Trap

By Preston Grover
Associated Press Staff Writer

With Advance British Forces in Libya, Feb. 2.—Like pieces of a jigsaw puzzle fitting into proper place, the story of the Seventh Indian Brigade's daring escape from Bengasi through enemy lines and tank formations was told today by its American-born English commander.

The account was unfolded at the brigade's assembly point here in the desert and was collected from experiences of the men.

It was the particular job of the Seventh Brigade to hold the Libyan port against enemy attacks. In order to assure this, the brigadier mined all approaches from the south and west and patrolled the area extending south to Agedabia and southwest to Msus.

But it was soon realized the Axis forces were greatly superior and their resistance much stronger than anticipated.

The commander prepeared to quit Bengasi, but on January 28 news reached headquarters that strong enemy tank and infantry units had been sent up with their spearhead aimed at Bengasi.

This made it impossible for the Imperials to escape along the road toward Barce; the brigade was encircled and the brigadier remembered Field Marshal Gen. Erwin Rommel's threat to wipe out the Indians who led the British advance into Cirenaica.

The brigadier ordered his force to split up into three columns and proceed to the assembly point as best they could—preferably through the desert in a wide swoop around German strongpoints.

The headquarters column and a second known as "the gold column" passed over their own minefields. They destroyed all other supplies and pushed on with Bren gun-carriers forming their only advance protecting screen.

As they approached the main road, the brigadier could see streams of enemy trucks, tanks, and other transport moving backward and forward. When this traffic died down the British columns crossed the road.

But an alert German motorcyclist spotted them. Soon strong enemy forces contacted the tail end of the headquarters column, led by the brigadier himself.

With only short halts in the moonless night, the column proceeded but in the distance saw tanks surrounded by motor transport.

Apparently suspecting an attack in force, the tanks hurried away, leaving the supply trucks at the mercy of the British.

Taking prisoners and filling the tanks of their own vehicles, the imperials forged forward and made the assembly point by the next night without further incident.

Meanwhile, the second column had lost its bearings but finally reached the assembly point.

Thus the Seventh Indian Brigade added another great achievement to its long record of desert successes.

And the praise goes to the brigadier, who was born in Pipestone, Minn. He planned the whole operation and during the trek often acted as navigator in treacherously dangerous areas.

Australia Acts To Step Up Its Plane Production

By the Associated Press

Melbourne, Feb. 2. — Australia swiftly developed more strength for her air, sea and land defenses today and heard a new call from Prime Minister John Curtin for shoulder-to-shoulder solidarity with Britain.

The Australian strategy apparently was based on the belief that although Singapore, still a mighty fortress, might withstand indefinite siege, it could no longer be regarded as impregnable.

Plane Output Hiked

Although details of defense measures decided upon at a weekend cabinet meeting were kept secret, these specific undertakings were announced officially:

The top age limit for service in the volunteer defense corps was raised to 65 years.

Arrangements have been made to step up the dominion's warplane output immediately and produce a new type of bomber.

Rear Admiral P. E. McNeill, chief of naval engineering, has left for the West Australian Port of Perth, on the Indian Ocean, to carry on work which took Curtin himself there last week.

The prime minister, announcing McNeill's departure, said the work was of "outstanding vital importance" to the Australian navy.

Big Outlay Planned There

He said an initial outlay of more than 15 million dollars was planned for construction of the new Australian-designed bomber which will be turned out, along with Beaufort bombers, with parts manufactured almost exclusively in the commonwealth.

Plans also have been approved, he said, for procurement of other planes, including fighters, and for expansion of the Australian air force's service and repair facilities.

In a fresh appeal for Allied unity, Curtin declared in a statement that it has been a constant enemy practice, "particularly of Berlin and Tokyo propagandists, to try to drive a wedge between the motherland and the dominions."

"No Australian and no Britisher," he said, "has lost his sense of perspective as to be a party to such an obvious device."

Elizalde to Collect Philippine Taxes

Persons or corporations in the United States subject to the Philippine Islands income tax law are to make their returns and payments to the office of Resident Commissioner J. M. Elizalde in Washington this year, the commissioner's office announced yesterday.

Returns and payments will be subject to review later by the Philippine collector of internal revenue and the authorization for this move was given in a cable to Elizalde from President Quezon "somewhere in the Philippines."

National Furniture Reports $1030 Theft

Anthony T. Geraci, manager of the National Furniture Co., Seventh and H Streets Northwest, yesterday reported to police the theft of men's and women's clothing valued at $1030.50 from his store Sunday night.

The articles stolen include 44 men's suits; 7 men's topcoats, 7 hats, 48 pairs of women's nylon hose and 18 ladies' print dresses.

A Modern Miracle: U. S. Postoffice Nearly Out of Red

Sometime next year Uncle Sam's postal service, a billion-dollar-a-year business, may be operating at a profit after years of being in the red.

The estimated $17,414,220 operating deficit for the current fiscal year which ended June 30 may be replaced in the next fiscal year by a profit of $848,009 if no hitches develop, Postmaster General Walker told the House Appropriations Committee in hearings reported yesterday.

First-class mail has been handsomely paying its way for years, yielding a profit of $146,815,578 last fiscal year, but other types of service have more than offset the gain. The largest losing item last year was second-class mail, which cost $83,519,746 more than the revenue it brought in.

Of the three types of first-class mail, only air mail now operates in the red, and the $6,961,373 deficit shown in that item last year is expected by postal authorities to be overcome completely by the end of this year due to a steady growth in air mail use.

Spiritual Valuations On Gain, Forum Told

The tragedy of Pearl Harbor has awakened the American people, and with this "a new birth of spiritual values lies ahead," the Laymen's Forum was told last night by Dr. Robert J. Slavin, O. P., associate professor of philosophy at Catholic University.

"Spiritual values must take he ascendency in all walks of life—recreation, business, art, finance and war," Dr. Slavin said.

three reverted to captain or major after the War.

Nominated to be a brigadier general at the same time was Col. Walter B. Smith, secretary of the War Department General Staff.

Roosevelt Orders Aid Bureau Here

President Roosevelt has asked Lowell Mellett, director of the Office of Government Reports, to expand the facilities of the United States information services to provide Washington visitors with a central source where they may obtain direction to the proper Government officials to handle their problems.

In a memorandum to Mellett, the President said many of the persons coming to the Capital were businessmen seeking advice on wartime problems. It was becoming more and more difficult for them to locate the proper officials, he added, and a central office was needed to coordinate some of the work of information divisions of various Federal agencies and departments.

Heart Attack Proves Fatal to Hitch Hiker

A 61-year-old hitch-hiker, en route to Florida from his home in Schenectady, N. Y., died in Alexandria yesterday, a short time after he was stricken with a heart attack while attempting to thumb a ride through the city.

The victim was Joseph Lewis, of 105 State Street, Schenectady, who was accompanied by his brother, Benjamin Lewis, about 54, of the same address. He was pronounced dead on arrival at Alexandria Hospital, where he was taken by a passing motorist.

British Riddle Burma-Bound Invasion Boats

By the United Press

Rangoon, Feb. 2.—Japanese troops were dumped by the hundreds into the treacherous Salween River today when British planes smashed and riddled the barges and boats in which they tried to force a crossing 130 miles east of here for a drive against the Burma Road.

British Imperials defending the river's west bank after a withdrawal from Moulmein, 8 miles to the east, had no chance for action.

R. A. F. bombing and fighting planes met the threat in midstream and disposed of it completely. The fliers had everything their own way, for one of the few times in this campaign, and they swooped low to make the most of it. Reports from the front said that when the planes had finished, the surviving Japanese were swimming in full retreat.

Many, wounded by machine-gun bullets and bomb splinters, drowned when they were unable to fight the treacherous current and their bodies sank or floated down to the sea.

An army communique said the situation on the Salween front remained "unchanged," though there was "sporadic shelling of Martaban (across the river from Moulmein) throughout the day." No casualties were reported.

The invaders from Thailand attempted to bridge the Salween northeast of Moulmein, at Kadu (Ferry) Island, at the river bend about 10 miles above the captured port.

Jap Commander Reported Suicide

LIEUT. GEN KORECHIKA ANAMI,

Japanese commander in China, has committed harkiri, according to reports from China. Two defeats at Changsha proved too much for him to take, it was said

Stew Recipe Creates a Stew

They were entirely correct, of course.

The elderly lady who phoned in to say that if this beef stew was part of the brave new world she preferred the way her mother and grandmother cooked it; the young housewife, who wrote us a letter saying she faithfully followed the recipe as printed in the January 25 issue of Parade and could we, please, help get her husband back, and the irate ship's cook who asked a reporter: "Whaddya tryin' to do? Start a mutiny at sea?"

We repeat, all of the many people who wrote or phoned in about that beef stew recipe were absolutely correct, and along with Parade we of The Post bow our heads in chagrin and humbly ask forgiveness for the headaches, the interior aches, the disrupted homes and what-not.

On page 20 of the January 25 issue of Parade, the weekly picture newspaper distributed with the Sunday Post, was printed a recipe for beef stew, America's favorite one-dish meal.

The recipe, which was for six servings, called, among other things, for one and one-half cups of bayleaves and thyme, which was almost a fatal error. It should have been one and one-half teaspoonfuls.

Again, we're sorry.

Auto Stamp Tax Now Past Due; No Arrests Yet

While every motorist on the street yesterday without a $2.09 Federal tax stamp on his car was subject to a $25 fine or a 30 days imprisonment, or both, no arrests were on record.

In fact, just how, or when, enforcement will begin was not clear. The internal revenue agents and deputy revenue collectors are the only officers directly authorized to pick up delinquent drivers, according to Murray F. Snider, head of the miscellaneous division of the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Snider said that cooperation of the District police had not been asked. This statement was confirmed last night by Maj. Edward J. Kelly, superintendent of Metropolitan police.

Meanwhile, motorists continue to buy stamps at any postoffice window. Total sales now are 190,533, Postmaster Vincent C. Burke said.

War Brings Specialization To Library Near Navy Yard

Situated so near the Navy Yard, the Southeastern Branch of the Washington Public Library—at Seventh and D Streets Southeast—has had a "defense career" thrust upon it, Librarian Louise S. Shepard declared yesterday.

"It brings the war very close when these 'men behind the guns' some swarming in for material on the delicate jobs of making the mechanism for loading and firing our big guns, or the making of cartridge cases," she said.

Since libraries are supposed to be centers of defense information, every effort is made to have on hand the types of books the Navy Yard men might find useful.

Welding, drafting, metallurgy, radio, and telescope range finders are some of the many subjects covered by the library's reading public, Mrs. Shepard said.

Also, Mrs. Shepard said, the branch serves the Naval Air tSation in Anacostia and must be up-to-date on aerological and meteorological questions.

"Less dramatic possibly, but equally important, is the book service we are giving to the families of these men and to defense newcomers," she said. "They want to know everything from local marriage laws to how to budget their money and get the most from their leisure time.

"Also we are happy to give them information about where they can register for defense, where the local draft boards are located, and where the first-aid centers are in their neighborhoods."

Gas Decontamination Classes Begin Tonight

First classes in gas decontamination for Washington will begin tonight at new headquarters of the air-aid warden services, 1341 Maryland Avenue Northeast, with Capt. Walter Roberts in charge.

They will continue weekly on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday at 8 p. m. for at least a month, according t an announcement from the District Defense Council.

Two classes of 26 members each will run simultaneously, one training squads for decontamination stations and one training field squads. Graduates will become teachers.

Until the graduates have been certified as teachers, however, the general public should "rely stand by" and take no notice of amateurs trying to explain all about gas, the council declared.

Dance Buses Leave From New Location

Mrs. Eva O. Steimer, director of the Women's Battalion dance program, yesterday announced that buses taking girls to camp dances now leave from new battalion headquarters at the corner of Pennsylvania Avenue and Ninth Street Northwest. Hostesses will assemble on second floor of the headquarters building "for checking," she said.

R. K. Spear Named Deputy Air Warden

Rolin K. Spear was elected deputy air-raid warden succeeding Vincent P. Boudren at a meeting of the Metropolis View Citizens Association last night at 200 Rhode Island Avenue Northeast.

In response to an appeal of Franklin G. Sartwell, president of the association, the members voted a donation of $10 to the Metropolitan Police Boys Club campaign.

Former Mayor Hurt In Safety Zone Fall

As director of civilian defense, former Mayor Charles W. Kress, of Binghamton, N. Y., spent a year trying to instill the lessons of self-protection under blackout conditions in his fellow townsmen.

KRESS

Then in the semidarkness of downtown Washington the mayor fell and cut his chin against, of all places, a safety zone.

Crossing F Street at Thirteenth last night Kress dodged a taxicab, he said, only to stumble against the streetcar platform.

"I didn't think I was hurt. But seeing my bleeding chin, a beautiful blonde came up and offered to take me to a doctor. I turned her down. I must have been unconscious," he reported.

He was treated at George Washington Hospital.

House to Probe Engel's Contract Fee Charges

Chairman Faddis (Democrat), Pennsylvania, told the House yesterday that a special House military affairs subcommittee had started an investigation of charges by Representative Engel (Republican), Michigan, that Lieut. Gov. Frank Murphy, of Michigan, sought fees for defense contracts.

Earlier, Engle had said he was referring the matter to a Senate investigating committee because the House committee had disregarded his demand for an inquiry.

GIRLS HELP COLLECT WARDEN'S FUND—The Kalorama Defense Council established an air-raid warden's fund of $500 at a meeting of members last night in the John Quincy Adams School. The fund, which is to be used to pay administrative expenses of the area's warden post, was made up of voluntary contributions. Tink Mortell (left) and Kay Rogan, of the National Catholic School of Social Service, acted as ushers and took up collection. Here they are examining each other's defense arm bands

City's Trolley and Bus Men Ready for Any Emergency

Streetcar and bus operators of Washington have prepared themselves against the possibility of air raids and also are mobilized to meet such schedules as staggered hours of the Government may entail, it was announced yesterday by J. G. Bigelow, president of Local Division 689 of the Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America.

Reshuffling of the hours during which Government employes go to and from work has led the union to agree that for 30 days its members will be ready for schedule changes daily, if necessary.

"This results in many of the men reporting for work at different hours every day in the week, but the disruption in living was cheerfully agreed to by the men," Bigelow said, "because they considered they were contributing something to national defense."

A system of telephonic communications has been established, Bigelow said, so that every streetcar and bus operator can be called into immediate service in the event of an air raid—to move cars and buses to scattered points so there will be no congestion of vehicles at any one place.

Air raid wardens have been appointed for every car barn, garage and shop of the Capital Transit Co., he said, al lof them former service men with experience in the World War. All of them have had courses in the handling of bombs and in fire fighting, and many of the operators have taken Red Cross first-aid courses.

Approximately 2500 operators can be assembled almost immediately to assist in an emergency, he declared, and a great number of men are reporting for duty at 4 a. m. daily so as to be there during "the dangerous early morning hours."

Already purchases of defense bonds by the men have totaled $40,000, Bigelow announced, and many are purchasing stamps and bonds under the payroll reduction plan.

Must Cut to Bone On Civilian Needs, Nelson Declares

War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson yesterday told the Senate that military demands for raw materials are mounting at such a pace that "civilian uses of critical materials must be cut to the very limit."

The statement, one of the gloomiest warnings yet to have emerged from the war agencies, was in an extensive report made by the former Office of Production Management in response to a Senate resolution asking for a study on the general policy and program for the distribution and allocation of materials.

Nelson declared that although supplies of domestically produced materials will be much greater this year than last, demand of the war machine has increased even more rapidly.

"The grim fact," the production czar said, "is that any concessions to a natural desire to prevent some present suffering and hardship may well have to be paid for by intensified suffering and loss of life at some later date."

Public Schools Register 85,837, 1000 Under 1941

Second semester of public schools began yesterday with an enrollment of 85,837 Washington boys and girls.

This marks a decline from last year's first day registration of approximately a thousand students and department of education officials attribute the decrease to the fact that students in the senior high schools are leaving school and taking jobs either in the Government or replacing people who have left other jobs for Government service while some are joining the armed services.

Registrations will be accepted today and Friday.

Elementary schools have shown a slight increase in registrations but this is more than offset by a decrease in vocational schools.

Movies' Boy Wonder To Make Latin Film

Hollywood, Feb. 2 (AP).—Orson Welles will leave by airliner tomorrow for Washington, D. C., enroute to South America, where he will produce and direct the first of two motion pictures about Latin America.

Welles said he will fly to Rio de Janeiro, and after filming scenes there, will continue on to other South American countries "to attempt a movie for all the people of all the Americas." The second film, a Mexican adventure story written by Welles, will star Dolores Del Rio and will be photographed in and near Mexico City and Vera Cruz.

It's All a Little Hazy, but It Seems There's No Drag

Call out the Naval Intelligence, somebody's trying to sabotage the Annapolis drag editor.

Evidence of boring from within comes from various sources, including Midshipman (First Class) S. J. Corwin, jr., president of the Naval Academy's Masqueraders Club, who writes:

"I feel it my duty to tell you that it is not a hop that the plebes rate dragging to (March 7 and 8), but instead it is a play performance of 'Mr. and Mrs. North,' presented by the Masqueraders. . . . I have been here three years, and I have never felt that the Midshipmen had to resort to publicity in the newspaper to get dates. I would appreciate it if you would just let the column die and supply addresses to those who ask for them."

And writes "Just a Parent Who Knows": "Listen, little girl, Annapolis bound: This invitation from the lonely plebe may not be all it seems on the surface.

"He says he will give you a wonderful time, but . . . you will be the one that gives from start to finish; you give your carfare going and coming; you give a nice little sum to put yourself up in that dreary little town for the night; you may even give your best slippers and the hem of your best evening dress, if it rains, as he walks you to the hall and back . . .

"What he means he will 'give' is his wonderful presence, that and just that. Many a fine Washington boy would be glad to do the same . . . If I were you I would watch my step and let the boys do the chasing."

And from three plebes, signing fictitious names, "We want the names and addresses of the three most homely girls in Washington so that we may instill new hope and faith in the hearts of all 'bricks' by 'dragging' them on that fateful weekend of March 7 . . . We also have a monetary reason for 'dragging' the unfortunate of the fair sex because we have a little bet, that has been covered, that we will drag the worst looking girls the academy has seen since it was founded nearly a century ago."

Sale of Retreads Faces Rationing

Henderson Fixes Maximum Prices On New Autos

Price Administrator Leon Henderson, who yesterday made public maximum prices at which new passenger cars may be sold to eligible buyers under the auto-rationing program, may soon extend rationing to the retreading and recapping of tires on civilian vehicles.

It was reported yesterday that either Henderson or the War Production Board will place restrictions on retreading in the near future. It was not known whether the action would take the form of an outright ban, followed by a rationing plan, or whether a priority system would be invoked. In either case it was expected that the use of new rubber to extend the life of existing tires would be drastically curtailed and restricted to a list of "eligibles" who use their cars for essential services. The list, however, was expected to be broader than the limited classes permitted to buy new tires.

Factory List Prices

The auto price schedule Henderson announced yesterday establishes the retail prices of the new cars by giving factory list prices for all makes and models and enumerating the various additions which the dealers may apply to the list prices. Wholesale prices, under the schedule, may not exceed the highest prices that prevailed for identical models during the period October 1-15, 1941.

Dealers are permitted to add to the factory list price the Federal excise tax and actual transportation charge, plus a profit figured at 5 per cent of the list price and transportation charge, or $75, whichever is lower. Also, the dealer is allowed to charge an additional 1 per cent of the list price, or $15, whichever is lower, for each calendar month that has elapsed between January 31, 1942, and the date of sale.

Compensation for Dealers

This last allowance is intended to compensate the dealers for the extra storage, finance, insurance and other charges that they must bear because their sales are limited by the rationing program and extended over a longer period of time than in the past.

The list of maximum factory list prices, to which the retail mark-ups may be added, include the following typical models:

Chevrolet Stylemaster town sedan, $800; Chevrolet Fleetmaster, five-passenger coupe, $845; Buick 40 Special 1-18, four-door touring sedan, $1080; Chrysler model No. C-34, four-door sedan, $1177; De Soto modal No. S-10, four-door seran, $1103; Ford De Luxe six, two-door sedan, $840; Ford De Luxe eight, two-door sedan, $850; Ford Mercury four-door sedan-town, $1065; Hudson six, de luxe two-door sedan, $945.50; Hudson eight, Commodore four-door sedan, $1223.50; Nash Ambassador-600 two-door sedan, $873; Oldsmobile Y-"68," two-door club-sedan, $870; Packard six, series 2000, special touring sedan, $1232; Packard eight, series 2001, special touring sedan, $1275; Plymouth model No. 14-P S, four-door sedan, $889; Pontiac torpedo six, two-door sedan, $940; Studebaker De Luxe Stylist Champion club sedan, $809.

Digestive Complaints, Underweight, Sluggishness, and Loss of Appetite— All by Two Important Steps—

Restore vital digestive juices in the stomach ... energize your body with rich, red blood!

Here's How!

If you are one of those unfortunates who have worked under a strain, failed to eat the proper foods, have been vexed by overtaxing worries, or have suffered with colds, the flu, or other illness ... yet have no organic trouble or focal infection ... and your red-blood-cells have become reduced in vitality and number ... if your stomach digestion refuses to work properly, then here is what should help you!

S.S.S. Tonic is especially designed to build up blood strength when deficient ... to revive and stimulate those stomach juices which digest the food so your body can make proper use of it in rebuilding worn-out tissue. These two important results enable you to enjoy the food you do eat ... to make use of it as Nature intended. Thus you may get new vitality ... pep ... become animated ... more attractive!

Build sturdy health

For when you tone up the stomach and get its digestive juices flowing freely, you should enjoy again that old-time zest for food ... stomach digestive miseries should vanish. S.S.S. Tonic also gives you the mineral matter in soluble and digestive form to restore your blood to its rich, red color ... to its so-called fighting strength ... this makes for better body tone ... muscular and mental freshness!

Because S.S.S. is in liquid form it begins its work as soon as you take it. Surprising results may be had by making the S.S.S. treatment a part of your daily diet. Thousands and thousands of users have testified to the benefits S.S.S. Tonic has brought to them and scientific research shows that it usually gets results—that's why so many say "S.S.S. Retreat In Libya

Twice in the course of the past year the British have swept across Libya from a point inside the Egyptian frontier to a point beyond Bengasi. Twice they have been forced back very far short of their objective. This time their strength in man power, in air power and in mechanized equipment was far greater than it was at the time of General Sir Archibald Wavell's spectacular exploit. But whereas General Wavell had only an Italian force to contend with, General Auchinleck had opposing him one of the ablest of German military leaders, Field Marshal Rommel. Auchinleck succeeded in meting out considerable punishment to the German panzer divisions concentrated in or near the Western Desert. But he never destroyed them. And from a base at El Agheila they were ultimately able to reform their lines and await and receive reinforcements which managed to elude the efforts of the British fleet to cut off the Axis supply line between Sicily and Tripoli. Now the Axis forces are again on the march to the east; the British have acknowledged that their advanced lines have now been withdrawn to a point 100 miles east of Bengasi; and the retreat continues.

There is no minimizing the seriousness of the blow which the British have received in Libya. To bolster up that front, Winston Churchill has admitted, reinforcements that might have made all the difference in the world in the Far East were sent to Egypt. But even thus strengthened the British were unable to drive through to Tripoli, as they had planned, because they never succeeded in smashing General Rommel's panzer divisions. The only consolation they have is that the German-Italian army in Libya is weaker today than it was at the time the British offensive began last November.

There is little possibility of General Rommel repeating his drive of last April when, after defeating the British at El Agheila, he was able, in an amazingly brief space of time, to recapture most of the territory previously lost by the Axis in North Africa. Egypt and the Suez Canal, which were directly menaced last spring, are safe today. That, from a defensive point of view, is a real gain. Yet it is heart-breaking to watch what had been a highly promising venture by the British—the first successful offensive by them against German troops—fall so far short of its goal. The job will have to be done all over again. In view of Far Eastern developments, it will have to be done over again in circumstances that may not lend themselves to the dispatch of large-scale reinforcements to the Near East.

Dollar-A-Year

Many objections can be found to the employment of dollar-a-year men in the Government service in ordinary times. Some of those objections were pointedly stated a fortnight ago by the Truman Committee investigating the war-production program. Last week, however, the committee withdrew its objections when Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board, made it clear that restrictions on the use of dollar-a-year men would hamper the war effort. Unquestionably the committee's present view is the realistic one.

In principle no official should be drawing a salary from a private concern, whether a corporation or a labor union, while he is holding a public position. Even if such persons make every possible effort to render impartial service, they will be suspected of bias, unless their efforts are confined to purely technical fields. Even then it is difficult to serve two masters well. In time of war, however, this principle, like many others, simply becomes inapplicable. For now there is only one master to serve, and that is the Nation in peril. Of course, individuals continue to have private interests, but in large measure these must be merged with the larger interests of the American people as a whole.

The one test of a man to be brought into the war program should be, therefore, as Mr. Nelson says, his integrity, capacity and zeal for the job. For many positions the WPB needs men who cannot be hired for $8000 a year. To be sure, some would give up large private salaries, as Mr. Nelson himself has done, out of patriotic motives. But they would inevitably look forward to the establishment of new connections in private industry when the war is over. That tendency might be a greater handicap to impartial public service than the dollar-a-year arrangement. And regardless of who pays the salaries of these men for the duration, their habits of thought and the principles to which they cling are not likely to be changed by a tour of duty in Washington.

The obviously sensible policy is to use dollar-a-year men wherever they can contribute to the war effort. Mr. Nelson has surrounded this practice by ample safeguards against abuse. Only executives or technicians of a high caliber will be taken into the WPB after investigation of their records. Experts drawing private salaries will be borrowed only when suitable men cannot be hired "with reasonable effort" at a regular Government salary. None of them will be permitted to make decisions affecting his own company. Mr. Nelson has wisely given the national interest precedence over routine peacetime rules. If the Truman Committee does likewise, it will not again criticize those who are directing our war effort until it has carefully and fairly measured their performance by wartime standards.

Between Two Fires

Secretary of Agriculture Wickard was asking for trouble when he sought and obtained power to pass upon the price ceilings set for agricultural commodities. Farm-bloc Congressmen believed that the Secretary would assist their plan for boosting farm prices far above parity levels. Evidently, however, they did not know their man. For Mr. Wickard has openly urged farmers to be content with parity, warning them that excessive prices now may mean depressed prices later on. Still more disturbing to farm politicians, Mr. Wickard has acted decisively to curb speculative increases in prices by offering to sell below parity levels surplus stocks of wheat and corn held by the Commodity Credit Corporation. It is not surprising, therefore, that he was summoned last Saturday to appear before the Senate Committee on Agriculture to explain his conduct. Subsequent comments indicate that Mr. Wickard's testimony shocked the sensibilities of the farm-bloc Senators.

Mr. Wickard's line of defense has been laid down for him by the President, who recently issued a pointed reminder that he is the "boss" of his Cabinet members as well as his Price Administrator. In signing the price-control bill Mr. Roosevelt stated that the Administration still regards parity prices as the goal of the farm program. Furthermore, he gave his approval to the bill with the understanding that it does not limit the existing powers of the CCC and other Government agencies to sell stored commodities. In other words, the marketing practices of the CCC undoubtedly meet with Presidential approval. He has even taken steps to circumvent existing legislative limitations upon the sale of Government-owned cotton by authorizing the CCC to transfer its stocks to other departments for war use. The President and not Mr. Wickard, therefore, is the moving spirit in the "plot" to circumvent the farm bloc.

It would, of course, be utterly indefensible for Government agencies to hoard supplies of basic commodities needed to further the war effort merely for the sake of boosting farm prices to excessively high levels. If the Secretary of Agriculture attempted to follow such a policy, he would deserve to lose his job. As matters now stand, the deficiencies of the Price-Control Act have been minimized to a considerable extent by the official interpretation of the agricultural sections. It is to be hoped that interpretation will not be challenged in the courts, since the law itself is highly ambiguous. Amendments to the law are needed, of course, to clear up obscurities of phrasing. But so long as the farm bloc has the upper hand in Congress, the President will probably not want to risk a test of his power by asking Congress to validate his interpretation of the act.

First Step

The encouraging thing about the Navy's assault on the Marshall and Gilbert Islands is not so much the immediate damage wrought as the visible proof that the fleet, based on Hawaii, can operate successfully in Japan's outer defense zone. True, it was important to strike at bases in the Japanese mandated islands from which enemy surface raiders and submarines may prey on Allied shipping en route to the South Pacific. And it was also important for the Navy's assault to be highly effective as a deterrent to future raids on Hawaii. Moreover, judging from preliminary reports of the damage inflicted on Japanese shipping, shore installations, and air power in the mandated islands, the American Navy's reconnaissance in force was fully justified by the immediate results obtained. But the long-range significance of the fleet action lies in the demonstration of what in future can be done rather than in the immediate results obtained.

The islands attacked lie some 2500 miles from Pearl Harbor—about as far distant as the fleet is supposed to be able to operate comfortably. They constitute the outer limit of Japanese fortifications, and our naval authorities have held that these fortifications must be reduced and the islands occupied before we can hope to project an American offense into inner Japanese waters. Presumably in line with this reasoning, American naval maneuvers have been held in years past just east of the islands attacked, between American-held Howland Island and Japanese-held Jaluit.

The American attack on Jaluit and neighboring objectives seems to indicate, therefore, that the fleet is in the process of adapting accepted sea strategy to existing requirements. In the attack the immediate objective was, first, to inflict as much damage as possible, and second, to test the Japanese defense. Later, perhaps after the defense has been further softened by renewed attacks, may come major landing operations by American forces. For once we are in a position to take and hold these islands, we deprive Japan of her offensive spearhead and force her back into defensive waters. It may be a good many months before we make much progress in the bitter business of advancing, step by step, across the island defenses between Jaluit and Japan proper. But a beginning has been made. That is the heartening thing. Less than eight weeks after the disaster at Pearl Harbor, fleet units were able to make the first tentative sortie. Its success augurs well for the all-out drive that will be called for, sooner or later.

Good News From Chile

The election of Juan Antonio Rios as President of Chile comes as a welcome sequel to the Rio conference. Chile was one of the two nations—the other being Argentina—which held out against a strong resolution favoring the immediate severance of diplomatic and commercial relations between the nations of this hemisphere and the Axis powers. But Chile's case was unlike Argentina's. Argentina's unwillingness to approve of such a measure arose out of the present government's desire to preserve strict neutrality in the present war. Chile's stand was determined by the practical consideration that a presidential campaign was in progress. The nation could not be bound until after the ballots had been counted.

To be sure, the conservative candidate, General Carlos Ibanez del Campo professed to be as ardent a partisan of hemisphere solidarity as his Popular Front rival. It was no secret, however, that he drew his support, in part at least, from the most antidemocratic and pro-Axis elements in Chile. It is a fair presumption, certainly, that had he been successful, Chile's readiness to carry out the recommendations of the Rio conference would today be very much in doubt. There was no such uncertainty about Senor Rios. He and the elements supporting him have never disguised their sympathy for the cause of the United Nations in general and of the United States in particular. The election of Senor Rios, therefore, and by a majority far in excess of that secured by the late Pedro Aguirre Cerda, the Popular Front candidate in the election of 1938, thus constitutes a decided triumph for the anti-Axis forces.

This development will not be without its effect on the neighboring country of Argentina. If Chile breaks off relations with Germany, Italy and Japan, as she is now likely to do, Argentina will be left the only country following a policy different from that being pursued by the other 20 republics of the New World. Dr. Castillo, the Acting President of Argentina, is said to be a stubborn individual, not often given to changing his opinion. That, coupled with his evident antidemocratic bias, may keep Argentina out of the charmed circle for some time. Yet the far from splendid isolation in which Argentina now finds herself, the violent dislike the Buenos Aires government's course has aroused in neighboring states may bring about a change in Argentine policy, regardless of President Castillo's views and the devious course he has pursued.

FAREWELL TO IRISES

I may not keep cold secrets in my heart too long; the numbed desires must have them out and let in air and sunlight where today's threshing and baking need the strength of me.
Youth, have you been too sweet to be relinquished?

Fetch in new books, my maidens, cut fresh quills, and cast the faded ink of yesteryear onto the straw. Our mouldered stairs want mending, our drive wants cobbles, and our lands the plough.
We shall set out new trees this day, young clover, shall clear the weedy brook, and weld new bolts to brace the beam that sags the stable door; and where the ancient hedge has ceased to bear its due of roses in the praise of spring, cut down, and stir the mulch for braver bloom!

Then come no more, young knight of the hidden quest, come no more past these gates, nor wait for me where lilacs bud and soft clouds bed the stars.
The bitter draft is drunk; the day is done;
nor even reverie shall ride the paths

Clerks

The cause for your "Parasite" editorial in this morning's Post goes a little deeper than the immediate war emergency housing problem. It goes back to the system operating in the Civil Service Commission. As a Government worker of four months in one of the largest and most important defense agencies, I am fully aware of the housing difficulties faced by so many clerks. Also, I am aware of the pressing need of clerical help here in Washington.

But . . . my observation has been that the need is for competent help, not the droves of clerks which Civil Service has unloaded on Washington since the emergency developed. We are in a war, and our clerical help should be geared to war emergency needs and to the requirements of the men who are here in Washington trying to do a real job for the Government. Instead we find two incompetent, inexperienced, immature and unskilled clerks doing a job with a lot of waste time and motion which could easily be accomplished by one more efficient girl. But Civil Service does not recognize real performance and efficiency and reward it as such, but brings in competents and incompetents alike—all on the same salary scale—and lets the men worry along as best they can.

If Civil Service would simply raise the standards of performance and reward the girls accordingly, I feel certain that we could dispense with a great deal of the clerical help now in Washington and attract to Government jobs the successful girls now employed in private industry. If we could relieve the men of as much detail as possible, and the necessity for constant direction and supervision, it would give them more time for the more important jobs which need to be done.

If such a policy is adopted it would certainly take care of the housing situation—at least partially—by bringing into Washington clerks of higher caliber rather than droves of clerks—some of whom do not know who the Axis or Allied nations are.

Longer Hours

What do you think of an employe who woke up half an hour earlier every day for a week just to get in practice?

"All out for defense" staggering of hours means a reconditioning of our responses to get up half an hour earlier in order to report for work on time.

There is now no comparison between a farmer and a white collar worker since both must get up before the sun rises.

Few people were late the first day the new hours were effective but many yawned all morning.

The night before, I remember, I set the alarm on the clock and worried all night for fear I would not hear it. Gee, it was hard getting up the next day. One-half hour makes a lot of difference.

Changing a 39-hour week to a 44-hour week lengthens the working day. The working day is an hour longer. It seems two hours longer! This stimulates the appetite at lunch time, and induces one to feel twice as weary in the evening.

Catching the bus without doing a "Dagwood" requires effort. The mind is willing but the body is weak. If one lives in the suburbs of the District, this involves learning the early bus schedule and conforming to it.

Soon the clock will be turned ahead for daylight saving but the stars will twinkle in the satisfaction of knowing you are doing your share for national defense.

Seabrook

Charles F. Palmer, Defense Housing coordinator, has been quoted as saying that, "It may become necessary to take over facilities possessed by those not engaged in war work and that those people not essential to the war should be asked to leave the District of Columbia."

Washington civilians need not be forced to move. If the housing coordinators would look around, they would see right at their very doorstep an ideal spot for all their needs.

We mean Seabrook, just outside of the District of Columbia, in Prince Georges County, Md., directly on the main line of the Pennsylvania Railroad, exactly 10 miles from the center of Washington. At Seabrook there is available all the Washington suburban utilities, plus uncongested transportation, coupled with all the room which the housing coordinators will need.

The housing coordinators could build all they need at Seabrook in the time it would take to dispossess property owners, dislocate families, break up community life and blitzkrieg our own citizens, at a fraction of the cost which the present plan will entail.

Curfew

As a Government worker, I wish to state that a "10 o'clock curfew" is not only childish, ridiculous, and impossible, but also very unfair.

We girls have given up our long established homes and friends to come to this overcrowded city and work for Uncle Sam. Most of us realize that during such an emergency, our services are badly needed. We realize this—but do you realize that:

1. We work an eight-hour shift that, including getting up, eating breakfast, going to and from work, lunch hour, and overtime, equals at least 12 hours?

2. Upon reaching home at 6:30 or 7 p.m. we have to wash, change, eat our dinner; after which it is near 8:30?

3. With a "10 o'clock curfew" (if possible to enforce) would leave us one and a half hours of fresh air and recreation a day?

4. Upon retiring to our rooms at 10 we have but four, often drab, walls to gaze upon? You are probably more fortunate and have your own home—we haven't!

This is a crisis period and we may be inclined to be selfish, but it isn't we 18-year-olds that caused this war—we are just trying to help stop it.

Mr. Lodge

I wish heartily to indorse your editorial commending the administration of Mr. Thomas E. Lodge as chairman of the ABC Board.

As a citizen representing what we consider the best interests of our community, and as president of a citizens' association, I have had occasion to appear before the board a number of times and without hesitation I say that, in my opinion, Mr. Lodge is the most capable chairman the board has ever had. He has the courage and backbone to do his duty. Yet there is opposition to his reappointment. I hope it will not succeed.

General "Billy's" Words

With the Roberts report still fresh in the American news print, let us turn back the military page to a day in 1925, when the late Gen. "Billy" Mitchell faced trial before the brass hats and knocked them skyward. That great fearless flying officer tried to tell the brass hats to "Keep Them Flying," and they clipped his hard-earned war wings by a trial which reduced his rank to a colonel and left him grounded.

Gen. "Billy's" words are worthy of a requote at this time when the brass hats, themselves, will soon face trial. Spoke the forward-thinking Mitchell, "Discipline is a difficult thing to determine. Some people call it the unhesitating obedience of a junior to a superior officer. If, however, conditions that obtain are not properly estimated by superior officers, and if superior officers are not that in fact, but only in name, then the discipline ceases because the people that are forced under them, recognizing they are incompetent for their positions, fail to have their trust and loyalty in them which should be the case in any undertaking."

The Roberts report will reveal that a hangover from 1925 to Pearl Harbor exists in our high command and that World War II will bring to the American public not only the damning of the Sons of the Setting Sun, but a keen realization that the brass hats are in need of a polishing. A great air-minded President will see to it that air-helmeted hats supplant the bickering hats once and for all time in the military administration of our armed forces.

Let us, as concerned Americans in the welfare of our community, learn a lesson from the Roberts report and the trial of the Brass Hats, and thank a great Congress for the first time in American history for the posthumous promotion to the rank of Major General of the late Col. William L. Mitchell. As our skies are darkened by new Army bombers named "Mitchell Bombers" in his honor, let us lift our eyes skyward and salute the great American airman.

Congressional Foibles

We have just received our orders to give up our home, our friends, and move to some strange town. Every day on my way to work I pass a huge, vacant bit of land, close-in, which, if properly developed, would house a hundred thousand workers. I refer to the land just north of Florida Avenue and east of Connecticut. If a Government office were built on this vacant tract, it would help a little to solve the traffic problem, and the people living in apartments built on the rest of it would be near enough to many other Government offices to walk to work.

What is the matter with Congress, anyway, that it does nothing at all to speed up housing for local workers? Why has our Congress, during every war in history, been so inefficient and indifferent to the people's welfare? Read the history of Congress during the American Revolution, the Civil War and now this.

These Congressmen have no trouble passing bills which will pension for life a Senator who was elected to office just once, and perhaps thereafter repudiated completely for incompetence. Why don't the papers say more about that indecency? They have no hesitation about uprooting families, franking out millions of enemy propaganda leaflets at taxpayers' expense.

My Name Is Mud

You may talk, if you want to, about the wonders of modern science, about the radio and the airplane and other ingenious devices of human invention, but none of them, I maintain, has contributed so much to man's essential happiness as the one that followed in the wake of the automobile. I mean the good old hard road, that blessed deliverer that has freed millions of people from mud.

The outward evidence of happiness in a man, at least of contentment, is a good disposition, and there is nothing so alien, so inimical, to a good nature as mud. Mud not only ruffles the spirits, it undermines one's morals and threatens one's faith in God. It destroys our confidence in what Nature in her off moments reveals to us of universal truth and beauty. Mud is the epitome of gloom, and when the old dirt roads used to begin to thaw up in spring there began a sorry season for the farmers on the backroads. It was a hundredfold worse to be mudbound than to be snowbound.

I have heard it said that of all mud Missouri mud is the most viciously viscous. As to that I cannot say firsthand, but I do know something about Illinois mud, which is nothing to be trifled with. On a March evening in 1924, I remember, a mixed quintet of us bethought to traverse by motor car the unimpressive distance from Greenville to Lebanon, Ill.—i. e., from one college town to another—to swell the visiting audience at an intercollegiate debate. I do not recall the burning question of forensic combat, or which side won. All I remember is the mud.

All went well until, forced by the inconsiderate exigencies of our destination, we turned south off the hard road onto (or into) the most agglutinative thoroughfares of all American fact or fiction. The mud came up to the axles, receded, and came up again. We swished and slued from one bottomless rut to another, hoping that the other side of the road would be better, but it never was. Every little ways we got out and pushed, then reloaded our bespattered selves, and wallowed on. It began to grow dark—it did grow dark, awfully dark. We would have turned back except that we erroneously thought it couldn't be any worse ahead than behind. Finally we saw the lights of Lebanon. We knew how Columbus must have felt when, on that Stygian night of October, 1492, he peered through his telescope and saw the Indians lighting matches on the island of San Salvador. The debate was halfway over when we arrived. We did not enjoy it much, for we were worrying about the trip back.

We started homeward boldly, for we were told of another route, a little longer to be sure, but somebody had come over it that very day, and that, at least, was encouraging. But we had gone only a few miles out of town before the wheels of the old Paige began to slow down. Ahead of us loomed the black "highway," the unending mud puddles shining under the headlights. On each side were the flat Illinois cornfields, great expanses of potential mud perforated by last year's stubble. The engine worked hard and faithfully, but finally after a few slow miles it gave up as we sank into a yawning rut and stuck there. Our spirits too sank to a new low, as Jennie Hayes moaned, "Oh, I wish I had died when I was a baby!"

It fell to me to walk back a ways and rout out a farmer to our rescue, but even with a team of apparently able-bodied horses he could not budge the embedded vehicle. He told us there was a little town a couple of miles up the road where we could spend the night. Chilled and mud-spattered, we walked into town and found a hotel.

The next morning we engaged a man with a tractor to extricate our besmirched automobile and pull it into town. The rest of the way home proved to be comparatively easy going. We did not have much to tell about the debate, but we had a lot to say on the subject of mud, and if you think I have exaggerated you can write for corroboration to Dr. Mae A. Tenney, professor of English, Greenville, Ill., a most courageous chaperon.

That was Illinois mud about 20 years ago. Those roads now, I have no doubt, have long since been paved with solid concrete and the country thereby made fit for man and beast.

I do not mean to imply that any one State has a manopoly on this juicy commodity. There is Nebraska, for example, where in mid-September of 1938 we followed a rainstorm on a 50-mile, unpaved stretch of detour along U. S. 20. Lest I offend her innocent inhabitants I will not mention the name of the Godforsaken town where we were obliged to spend a night waiting for the roads to dry. For approximately one day, however, we wallowed in mud.

I have seen mud too in New York State. (My grandfather cleared and drained his sizable farm out of some of the swampiest, muckiest acres west of the Genesee.) And I have seen it in Virginia, where I am now domiciled. Once I wrote some verses in dubious praise of this venerable State. The last stanza went—

Ah, Spring! This very day I feel
You tugging at my steering wheel,
As lingering Winter's winds congeal
My blood.
And though I praise in puny verse
This section of the universe,
I pull up 'side the road and curse
Her mud.

I sent them to an editor in Roanoke, who replied: "Why don't you stay on the hard road?" And ever since I have conscientiously tried to follow his advice. For the hard road, so long as we are determined to ride in motor cars, is a boon that has made us very happy, whether we know it or not.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Submitted In Evidence

MUCH BETTER ways will have to be worked out if the American people are to exercise their inalienable right to understand the war. Just how this can best be done under our form of government I do not know. But in a thing of this sort, where there is the will it is always possible to find the way. Perhaps those of us who work as newspapermen in Washington may have something to contribute from our own practical experience.

LIPPMANN

ON TUESDAY afternoon of last week I attended the White House press conference. It was the first which Mr. Roosevelt had held since the Roberts Report on Pearl Harbor. On that day also the first news had come out that American troops had landed in Northern Ireland. Gen. MacArthur was fighting in Luzon. The Navy and the Air Corps were fighting in the Strait of Macassar. German submarines were raiding along the Atlantic Coast. The formation of the joint boards agreed upon during Mr. Churchill's visit had been announced, and in London Mr. Churchill was describing also the general scheme of the unity of the staff command which he and Mr. Roosevelt had arranged.

Surely this was a day when there was big news which the people were entitled to understand, and indeed must be enabled to understand. We lined up around the President's desk and, as I remember it, he told us in effect that he did not have anything important for us. Half a dozen of the newspapermen asked him questions bearing directly upon the big news items of the day which were in everyone's mind. None of them got anything which could be described as responsive. They made as much progress as a man trying to climb a greased flagpole, and I do not think I was the only one who left the White House feeling frustrated and dispirited, not wiser for the trouble of attending the press conference but much sadder.

IN THINKING it over it has seemed to me that if Mr. Roosevelt is willing to hold personal press conferences, he is making very poor use of them. He appears to think, though occasionally there are exceptions, that if he does not have news to give out which can be put hot onto the ticker and into the headlines, there is not much to be said and his main business is to parry the questions of over-curious reporters.

But as a matter of fact straight news can be given out and is usually given out through the departments or through the White House staff. It certainly is not necessary for the President of the United States to collect the reporters in order to hand out news. The very idea of such a conference is that the President can talk off the record to newspapermen and through them to their editors in order that they may be able better to understand what the news means. Any one can announce news but only the President and his Cabinet and other high responsible officials can explain it.

THE DIFFERENCE between news and explanation seems to me not to have been grasped in wartime Washington. I believe this is the fundamental reason why the Nation finds itself fighting a war without understanding it. Sooner or later the cry is going to go up that it is the fault of the censor that the people cannot get the news, that they are in the dark. But it is not the fault of the censor. There is plenty of news. The trouble is that there is no continuing and patient explanation of the news.

A few concrete examples will, I think, show what I mean. Let us take first the news that American troops had landed in Northern Ireland at a moment when Gen. MacArthur was fighting with his back to the wall. Surely this was a case when it was not enough to announce the news, when it was very necessary to explain why the troops went to Ireland and not to Luzon.

THE EXPLANATION is no military secret. Indeed, anyone can figure it out for himself. But the fact is that most people do not figure it out for themselves, and there are demagogues and agitators who are quick to exploit and bedevil the innocence of the people who are deeply moved about MacArthur but have not had explained to them the strategic geography of the Philippine Islands and the western Pacific. Yet it would not be giving away information to the Japanese to explain why troops have not been landed in the Batan Peninsula.

Thus it is a military secret as to what is the strength of MacArthur's forces and what are his supplies and what help is being gotten to him and how. But it is no military secret that the island of Luzon is surrounded by the Japanese forces, and that Wake and Guam are lost, that the fleet at Hawaii is temporarily crippled as a great offensive force capable of fighting its way across the Pacific to the Philippines, and that Japan has innumerable submarine and air bases in countless islands between the United States and Luzon. All these things are known to any one who has looked at a map and read the papers. But only when the things which are known are put together by someone in authority does mere news become an explanation that makes sense, and answers the perfectly legitimate question why MacArthur has not been reinforced by fresh troops.

TAKE A SECOND example, the question whether it would have been better to keep the whole fleet in the Pacific, and not detach a fleet for the Atlantic. This is exactly the same kind of question as Mr. Churchill had to answer when he faced the House of Commons, and had to explain why Britain was so weak at Singapore when Japan attacked. There is no reason why Mr. Roosevelt, once the Roberts Report was out, should not make his explanation to the American people.

There is nothing mysterious about it, nothing secret,—indeed it is obvious to those who have had the chance to study the matter. But it is not obvious even to all of Congress, much less to all the people, and I presume to think that the day after the Roberts Report was published was the day for the President to tell the Nation the story of his naval policy in the past 18 months. It is a very creditable story, given the desperately hard choices that had to be made, and I cannot imagine any reason why the President has never told it, why he did not tell it when we went to war, or when he delivered his message to Congress in January, or why he does not tell it now.

WHY NOT explain to the people that the fleet in the Pacific plus the ships Britain could send to Singapore was a very good match for Japan until the attack on Pearl Harbor and the sinking of the Prince of Wales and the Repulse? Why not point to the Nazi submarines off the Atlantic Coast and in the Gulf of Mexico, and then ask Congress and the people whether they think it would have been better to have no American fleet in the Atlantic, and whether they think that we should have taken the chance that by blockade of the British Isles the home base of the British fleet could be knocked out as Singapore is knocked out in the Pacific?

Why not explain the truth, the immensely gratifying truth, that if we have had reverses in the Pacific, we have played a gallant part in averting even more irreparable reverses in the Atlantic? Why not explain the great role which the Atlantic fleet has played since last spring in making it impossible for Hitler, though he has declared war on us, to strike effectively at us? For him to strike at South America? Why not explain what the Navy has done to make it possible for Brazil and the other exposed American republics to take the risks they have taken at Rio?

NOBODY CAN really tell the story and explain it except the President himself, and his immediately responsible officials—Messrs. Hull, Stimson, and Knox. They ought to be telling it, the good with the bad, and the bad with the good. The people can take it, and they will like it, and there will be laid down in this way, as in no other way, the foundations of confidence—that is to say of understanding and of trust.

Spanish Colony

By Juan de la Cruz

Occupied Philippines

THE REPRESSIVE measures promulgated not many days ago by the Japanese military throughout the occupied regions of the Philippines, particularly proscribing the movements of the non-enemy white population, will probably, if nothing else, change the attitude of the over 4000 Spanish citizens who have chosen to make their homes in the islands.

News dispatches emanating from the Far East do not state what fate has befallen them. Judging from their past actions, there is every likelihood that they struck a bargain with the invaders and are presently collaborating with them. For these Spaniards are not only pro-Axis in sympathy but rabidly anti-American as well.

Even as late as 1940 a Spanish rector of a well-known university in Manila was found to be conducting extracurricular Fifth Column activities. The case against him was played up on the front pages of Manila newspapers for a day or two; but, surprisingly enough to the Filipinos, it finally simmered down and was forgotten when some Commonwealth government officials intervened on his behalf.

IT IS a well-known fact among the Filipinos, however, that ever since Admiral Dewey's guns silenced the Spanish coastal batteries and sank the Spanish fleet on that historic day of 1898, the Spaniards both in Spain and in the Philippines never ceased nurturing the fervent hopes of getting the Philippines back into the Spanish fold. To them, according to the Spanish newspaper Arriba, the "islands are the heart of Spain." And they even dream of reoccupying their erstwhile positions of power and privilege which, to them, the Americans had undeservedly usurped. Fortunately for them, the Philippines have remained a fertile ground for their insidious propaganda. For the ties that bound the islands to Spain are not altogether severed, even after these many years of separation. Philippine culture, in all its phases, is still distinctly Castilian in character. For instance, the language of Cervantes still predominates in the legislative chambers, in the courts of the land and at social functions. Nowadays it is a sign of low breeding for a Filipino not to be able to carry a conversation in Spanish. Moreover, many Filipinos who occupy responsible Commonwealth government posts are of Spanish descent. Which led a Filipino wit to say that "the Philippine government today is owned lock, stock and barrel by mestizos" (half-breeds).

Furthermore, next to Americans, the Spaniards play an important role in the economic life of the country. Their interests are widespread. The vast Compania Tabacalera de Filipinas (shipping, real estate, distilleries, cattle ranches, lumber, gold mines), the Soriano companies (beer, real estate, cattle ranches, lumber, gold mines), the Zobel interests (real estate, drugs, fisheries), the Tuason and Legarda interests (real estate, distilleries), the multifarious Elizalde companies (the only pro-American in the bunch, and composed of rope factories, paints, distilleries, shipping, insurance, gold mines, lumber, cattle ranches, real estate) and many others are of strictly Spanish control.

During the sanguinary Spanish civil war Don Andres Soriano, head of the Philippine Soriano interests, shuttled back and forth between the Philippines and Spain carrying funds to support Franco's Falangist hordes that massacred thousands and thousands of innocent Spanish civilians.

HEADQUARTERS of the Spanish Fifth Column activities in the Philippines was the Casino Espanol, an imposing building located on an avenue named by Filipinos after the first and best-loved civil governor of the Philippines, William Howard Taft. Here, in the early part of the day until late at night, one will find an array of Spanish dons and their duennas sipping their cocktails and forever talking of the day when the Philippines will become again a part of Spain.

Here, too, they concocted ways and means to undermine every vestige of American sovereignty over the Philippines. As part of their grandiose scheme they cajoled Filipinos with every form of flattery, such as nominating those pro-Spanish to the exclusive and haughty Spanish Academy of Arts in Madrid. When President Manuel L. Quezon was only a political fledgeling these Spaniards were his enthusiastic supporters, giving not only sympathy but money as well.

It is possible that the Japanese invasion of the Philippines has upset their plans. No one, least of all the Spaniards themselves, could have foreseen the implications of this invasion. But whatever happens, these Spaniards were responsible for their own fate, having invited it with selfish foresight. They are now simmering in their own fat, and to judge by what the Japanese invaders are doing in the islands, they will stay simmering.

Retiring Jurors Give Testimonial to Justice

Jurors retiring after a month of service in the court of Justice T. Alan Goldsborough of the District Court yesterday presented the justice with a testimonial.

The jurors praised Justice Goldsborough for his attitude toward defendants and for the charity and brevity of his instructions.

Bid For Bossism In The Capital

WILLIAM T. SCHULTE, Congressman from Indiana, is giving us a striking illustration of what is wrong with the District government. On Saturday he said he would ask the House District Committee, of which he is ranking Democratic member, to put Gregory J. Rankin, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, on the carpet because the PUC has authorized a taxicab "pickup" experiment. Yesterday he made an obvious effort to browbeat Mr. Rankin while the committee was taking testimony on bills dealing with other subjects. Then, to make a day of it, he threatened to use his heaviest artillery against local officials because the Commissioners have reappointed Thomas Lodge to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

PUSEY

If this outrageous interference with agencies of the local government had been present in only two isolated cases, it could be discarded as a flare-up of temper. But they are not isolated cases. Once Mr. Schulte brazenly appeared before the Public Utilities Commission in a case involving a taxicab company. No one has ever explained what national interest he was representing. Nor does it appear that the Indiana district he represents is particularly well served by his efforts to regulate Washington's public utilities from the House Office Building.

Of course, Mr. Schulte's activities in the taxicab field are one of his minor interests in Washington. His propensity for interference with the District government is well known to most local officials. The focal point of his high pressure tactics is the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board. Two years ago, for example, he demanded an investigation of the ABCB after saying he had received information that liquor licenses were being sold for as much as $7000 each and that 25 per cent of the liquor dealers of Washington were former "bootleggers." An investigation was conducted, but its most significant disclosure was that the board is bedeviled by members of Congress attempting to use their influence to obtain special favors.

TO BE SURE, Mr. Schulte is not the only member of Congress who applies the thumbscrews to the ABCB. One of the controversial cases which led to the investigation in 1940 was that involving the Stables on E Street near the Potomac River. The National Park Service had objected to issuance of a license to sell liquor on those premises because they are just across the river from the Theodore Roosevelt Memorial. Protests were also made by A. J. Wirtz, then Acting Secretary of the Interior, and W. E. Reynolds, commissioner of public buildings. So the application was denied.

Files of the liquor control board disclose the following conversation between Chairman Thomas E. Lodge and Thomas Settle, of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, shortly after this application was turned down:

Mr. Lodge: . . . And I know there are several Senators and Congressmen very deeply interested in it.

Mr. Settle: Why should they be interested in it?

Mr. Lodge: I don't know. One of the Senators lives next door to the applicant and probably is interesting himself as a friend, and there is one Congressman from where these people come, and Randolph is interested.

THE PROTESTS from agencies in the Interior Department were subsequently withdrawn; an investigation of the board was started by the House District Committee; and shortly thereafter the board reconsidered its decision and issued the license. A memorandum in the files shows that the offices of Senator Overton and of Congressmen Harter, Seccombe, Randolph and Kennedy were advised in response to previous telephone calls. Perhaps the board was entirely correct in its second judgment. The point is that it is impossible for any quasi-judicial board to administer the law with strict impartiality when legislators with power to embarrass or destroy the board attempt to influence its judgment.

Senator Mead's secretary called the ABCB to offer information bearing upon the application of Misha Bess for a license to sell liquor at a "swanky spot" in Washington. A memorandum also notes a call from the Senator's office advising the board that he was interested in the Bess case.

A note in the handwriting of Mrs. Agnes K. Mason, of the ABCB records a call from Congressman Harter in connection with the application of Samuel Kessler for a liquor license. Senator Bilbo called on the same case to point out that the neighborhood in question is "strictly commercial and not residential." In this case, however, the board denied the application.

There are numerous letters in the ABCB files from members of Congress seeking special favors for individuals interested in the liquor business. Do not conclude, however, merely because the examples of political interference are numerous, that Congressman Schulte has been a piker in this field. That would be grossly unfair to a politician of his energy. Mr. Schulte recently interested himself in the case of Samuel W. Slavitt to the extent of bringing pressure upon a member of the Board of Commissioners as well as the Liquor Control Board. Finding Mr. Slavitt guilty of violating a regulation against handbill advertising of liquor, the board had ordered his license suspended for seven days. After Mr. Schulte had smeared the District Building with his strongest line of invective and threatened to blast the lid off the ABCB in another Congressional investigation, the penalty in the Slavitt case was reduced to a one-day suspension.

Apparently encouraged by that concession, he demanded Mr. Lodge's scalp and is now raising a furor because he didn't get it.

THIS IS the sort of atmosphere in which the public business of the Nation's Capital is conducted. In the circumstances it would not be surprising to find the local agencies of government reeking corruption. Under the whip of politicians who have no fear of reprisals from voteless citizens, District officials could easily let the local regime descend to the level of a racket. That they have not done so is a credit to their stamina.

It is fully evident, however, that below-surface pressure has reached dangerous proportions. A local government completely dependent upon Congress for every dime it spends cannot hope to function with any degree of efficiency or fairness if it is to be subject to the whims of either one or many little bosses on Capitol Hill. The ugly fact is that a well-intrenched boss has the power to make the entire community suffer when any local official refuses to play his game. And Congress is blindly relying upon this type of regime to see the Capital through its greatest crisis since the Civil War.

Debunking Needed

Let's have some priorities on applesauce!

What this country needs as much as anything else in its war effort is a limitation on morale building claptrap from special interests, spotlight lovers, publicists, promoters and fakers.

We favor a Federal Anti-Hooey Administration, and the passage of the following rules at once:

1. There shall be an immediate suspension of the theory that almost any racket is necessary to the upkeep of American morale.

2. All speeches to the effect that the war will be lost if there is any falling off in public interest in bowling, kelly pool, double headers, daily doubles or hoop rolling shall be regarded as anti-American.

3. Use of any microphone to broadcast the nonsense that our Army, Navy and air force will never be able to do its best if the program on a half-mile horse track is cut from eight to seven races shall be forbidden.

4. There shall be an immediate curtailment of the wholesale photographing of spotlight performers in connection with every new campaign, and a little less emphasis on the notion that no drive can be successful unless it is linked up with toe dancers, bathing beauties and strip tease artists.

5. The originator of the idea that Defense Stamp sales could be wonderfully promoted by distributing newspaper pictures of a nearly naked showgirl surrounded by service men picking stamps off her torso shall be deported.

6. The use of most of the cheap, tawdry and distinctly disgusting devices of the burlesque showman, the sideshow ballyhoo man and the honky-tonk press agent in connection with any United States drive designed to command the serious attention of the American people shall be terminated without further notice.

7. All persons aiding the war effort who seem to think the war must be regarded from the same viewpoint as a movie preview, a Hollywood marriage or a five-ring circus shall be regarded as screwy.

8. As a test of sincerity and appreciation of the fact that only the boys in the fighting forces are really important today, all actors, showmen, ice skaters, tightwire walkers, night club comics and clowns shall willingly do what is asked of them in any drive, without pictures.

9. A serious effort shall be made by all leaders in national drives to realize that hokum, baloney, corn and tripe are too cheap to rate any place in the most important undertaking in national history.

10. Before any campaign, movement, drive, effort or what have you is launched in connection with the winning of the biggest war in history, all persons connected with it shall be required to certify that they think the American people sufficiently intelligent to do their bit without being treated as if they were morons, nitwits, degenerates or silly asses who were thrown out of the third grade in public school as problem children.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

YEARS AGO, in my little home town in Minnesota, John Powers, our constable, used to pick up bums who tarried to maybe crack a safe or rob a clothesline on the way to and from the wheat fields and take them before our august Mayor, Mr. Sampson, who was also our judge and held court wherever he happened to be. I have seen him hold court leaning against the front of Aug. Hay's meat market and sitting in the shade of the W. C. T. U. drinking fountain which was in a little pavilion. Mr. Powers would lead his bum up to our Mayor and the Mayor, without any "oyez" or "court is now holden," would look at his watch and say that the next freight was due through at such and such a time. This was common procedure in those days in those parts and was known as "hours." A bum got so many hours to leave town, and if he didn't leave he was supposed to be charged with vagrancy and jailed up for a month. Even then it occurred to my acutely constitutional mind that this sort of doing was somehow irregular, but I never thought it would happen to me, and in the Capital of my native land and by decree of the President of the Republic, of all people, but here I am in Detroit. Maybe this isn't far enough; maybe I better go to Canada.

PEGLER

I didn't even know the President had any idea that I was in Washington until all of a sudden he remarked to his press conference that all parasites ought to leave town and that those who didn't leave voluntarily could be made so uncomfortable that they would break up camp and go under indirect compulsion. He was in his own office when he said this but, in effect, he was leaning against Aug. Hay's market, because he really has no right to do this. Even now I keep saying to myself, "Why he can't do this to you; he can't give you hours to get out of Washington," but then I say, "The hell he can't, brother; you are in Detroit, aren't you?"

Imagine!

BUT HE must have meant some others, because he used the plural form, and yet I seem to be the only one who took his remark personally. Down at the station I looked around, thinking I might see Mrs. Roosevelt's protege, Mr. Joe Lash, that veteran and inveterate professional youth of 32, who is always in and out of the White House, but if he was on the lam I didn't make him. Probably he isn't, because Mr. Lash, though not quite the type for a commission in the Naval Intelligence, is nevertheless something in something called Youth Advisory Council of Civilian Defense, which may be something whipped up special to employ his peculiar talents, whatever they may be. He was down there the other day, because I saw him in Mrs. Roosevelt's column. I looked also for some of those milky old presidents emeritus of stylish girls' colleges who are always getting up youth conferences, but all I could be positive about were some soldiers, who certainly weren't parasites, some rather obvious Detroit manufacturers, and a young FBI fellow who undoubtedly was going along to see that I didn't double back from Baltimore. I thought surely I would see quite a passel of parasites from Paul McNutt's department, of some business experts from price-control who got their training as dirty-book novelists in Paris and Union Square, or anyway, one anticapitalist poet from the Office of Facts and Figures. You would have thought they would sacrifice at least one Communist press agent, just as a token, even if they let him come back next week, but no, I tell you, I was the only one in town who caught the freight.

And I wasn't living on Government money. I was on expense account from my cherished employer, and although I did have a pretty nice room to myself, with two beds, one, of course, unused, I wasn't making any inroads on the food supply, because I eat practically nothing on the road.

I WAS sorry about the unused bed, but a man does have to be careful, and I am not being suggestive either. Any man who has traveled with a ball club knows that in a blind draw you might get a roommate like the late Wild Bill Phelon, who kept lizards and used to sit by the window with a bag of mothballs, shooting people with a slingshot, or one who eats apples out loud in bed, or one of those presidents emeritus, or even Lash.

All right, I heard the President and I went, but what about old Charlie Michelson? Is he essential to the war effort?

Eicher Will Take Oath Today

Supreme Court Justice William P. Douglas today will administer the oath of office as chief justice of the District Court to Edward Clayton Eicher, whose nomination was confirmed by the Senate several weeks ago.

Attending the ceremony will be high officers of the Department of Justice and the Securities and Exchange Commission, of which Eicher was lately chairman; leaders of the bar associations and other dignitaries.

The new chief justice will don his robes before a bench of 11 of his future colleagues, presided over by the senior justice, Jennings Bailey.

The seating of Eicher, succeeding Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat, retired, restores the District Court bench to its full strength.

Court of Appeals Gives New Ruling On Crash Liability

The United States Court of Appeals here yesterday declared that in certain cases all those to blame for an accident must share the cost of the damages awarded the victims.

David Oisboid, 320 Shepherd Street Northwest, sued George's Radio, Inc., for an acident involving Oisboid's automobile on one hand, and on the other a George's delivery truck and Capital Transit Co. bus.

Oisboid got a judgment for $850 and the radio company, through Attorney Lawrence Koenigsberger, sought to make the transit company pay half of it.

The common law rule, often pronounced by the Supreme Court, is that the courts will not apportion liability among wrongdoers. However, Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner, of the appeals court, said yesterday that a distinction must be made in cases where the parties are not actually "wrongdoers," but are merely treated as such for the purpose of settling damages.

Court Upholds U. S. Control of State Trade

By the Associated Press

The Supreme Court strengthened Federal authority over local business yesterday with a sweeping decision that Congress can regulate any trade—even that conducted entirely within one State—if it competes with interstate commerce.

Specifically, the court upheld unanimously an order by the Secretary of Agriculture under the 1937 Marketing Agreement Act fixing minimum prices for milk produced and sold entirely within Illinois. The tribunal took this stand because the product competed in Chicago with milk from outside the State, the price of which was regulated.

Two other decisions upheld Federal powers at the expense of State authority. The court held, by divided votes, that:

1. Alabama could not enforce its State health law in connection with the manufacture there of "renovated" butter. The State considered this butter an adulterated food, but was told to keep hands off because the Federal Government had stepped into this regulatory field.

2. New York would have to recognize the confiscation by the Soviet government in 1919 of Russian property in that State, notwithstanding its own State laws on the subject, because the Federal Government had granted recognition.

In the Alabama case, the Court's 5-to-4 decision found that Congress, under its interstate commerce powers, had given the Secretary of Agriculture exclusive authority to inspect the manufacture of renovated butter and that the State thus could not act.

"Since there was Federal regulation of the materials and composition of the manufactured article," said the majority opinion by Justice Reed, "there could not be similar State regulation of the same subject."

But Chief Justice Stone, in a dissenting opinion in which Justices Frankfurter, Murphy and Byrnes concurred, contended that the Federal law did not prohibit State inspection as well and that the majority decison departs "radically from the salutary principle that Congress . . . will not be deemed to have intended to strike down a State statute designed to protect the health and safety of the public," unless the State act conflicts with the Federal law, "or plainly and palpably infringes its policy."

Frankfurter also wrote a separate dissent to criticize the majority finding in even stronger terms. He declared that it "gratuitously destroys the harmonious cooperation between the Nation and the States in safeguarding the health of our people" and called the decision "purely destructive legislation."

The Russian case involved $1,335,653 in assets of a liquidated Russian insurance company. The assets were in the firm's New York office and the State insurance superintendent laid claim for the purpose of distributing them to certain claimants. The United States claimed the funds on the ground that the Soviet government had taken over all private insurance companies under a nationalization decree and that the funds came within an assignment of claims which Russia made to the United States in 1933 when President Roosevelt recognized the Soviet government.

The principal issue was whether the Soviet government's confiscation decree was valid in New York. The court held that it was by 5 to 2 decision, with Justices Reed and Jackson not participating.

Justice Douglas, in the majority opinion, declared that the previous decisions of New York courts holding the Russian nationalization decrees invalid there, constituted a refusal by New York to recognize acts of the Soviet government "which the United States by its policy of recognition agreed no longer to question."

The high court delivered a 7-to-0 opinion holding that the Federal Norris-LaGuardia Act, which limits the use of injunctions in labor controversies, was "not intended to have application to disputes over the sale of commodities." It upheld an injunction requiring the Pacific Coast Fishermen's Union to sell its product to the Columbia River Packers Association.

In other cases the Supreme Court:

Ruled that "farmers cannot be deprived of the benefits" of the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage moratorium statute "because a court may believe that they have received the equivalent of what it prescribes."

Held that a railroad granted a right-of-way through the public lands by Congress in 1875 did not acquire ownership of the underlying oil or minerals.

Granted the Government a review of a decision setting aside the conviction of William R. Johnson, alleged Chicago gambling house operator, and others, on income tax evasion charges.

Trim Matronly Hips by Exercise

So matronly—those broad hips—and looking so conspicuous when we must stoop or climb stairs! Why put up with them?

No one need do so, for there are simple exercises which quickly get rid of those bulges. Ordinary walking won't, for that only exercises the hip joints in a forward and backward motion. Muscles get slack and fatty pads develop.

Here is one of a routine that turns you into the slim-hipped sylph modern dresses require.

Home Sewing Coming Back Into Its Own

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor

ANY WOMAN who can wield a needle will come into her own these days. And many women who have never so much as darned a stocking are also looking to the needle to answer their clothing problems. Home sewing is proving to be the solution to mothers who have large families to clothe, as well as to young girls who have always worn custom-made clothes and can no longer afford them.

MRS. PICKENS

By a rough estimate, the demand for dress material has increased at least 40 per cent over last year, according to Walter Lehman, dress goods buyer for a local store. "On the whole," said Mr. Lehman, "women are buying more sturdy fabrics for this spring and next season." The buyer pointed out that designers and dressmakers also say there is a great demand for girls who can sew. Business is booming so that the supply is not equal to the demand.

Clothes Creed

Mary Brooks Pickens, the author of about 25 publications on sewing — including textbooks, manuals, courses and pamphlets —has done much to foster interest in dressmaking. She is president of the Mary Brooks Pickens School in New York, which teaches dressmaking and all its finer points.

Mrs. Pickens expresses her creed about clothes as follows: "I believe that the modern woman finds joy in making clothes only when they express her individual ideas of beauty and becomingness and contribute to self-respect. Gone is the day of setting careful stitches in squares of cloth. There must be something wearable to show for each day's work.

"I believe that every normal woman can make herself more attractive if she studies how to choose and wear clothes best suited to her personality. I believe that beauty and appreciation of beauty can be developed in any community, in any environment, against any background."

Avoid Drab Clothes

In these times when women have a tendency to choose dull, drab clothes, this emphasis on beauty is timely. It may take a little more time to select or make beautiful clothes now, but the results will be worth a try, according to this expert.

Mrs. Pickens has not written her books in a day. She was 31 years in writing one of her latest books, "The Language of Fashion." It is really a dictionary of words and phrases that cover every phase of fabrics, sewing and dress.

Shellac Problem

Shellac may turn out be a war problem. It is made from resin in gum form which comes from India. There is a supply on hand in America that would normally last about six months, but the defense program will probably need most of that for it is used for finish on airplanes and all shells are dipped in it.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Although Man, 51, "Literally Adores" His Wife, He Fears His Respect and Love for Her May Wane, Because She Smokes and He Detests the Habit.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a man 51 years of age. I have been married 13 years. Briefly, my problem is this: My wife smokes and I detest the habit, chiefly because I think it is detrimental to her health; but also because I think the open practice of smoking makes a woman look coarse and tawdry. I have always had a high regard for my wife and do not like to think of her being viewed in an unfavorable light.

Feeling as I do, I asked my wife a few years ago to give up this habit. She solemnly agreed to do so. But soon I caught her smoking again. She employs all sorts of subterfuges to make me think she isn't smoking, and when I let her know I am "on to her game," she makes no excuses and expresses no regrets. She just says nothing. This tacit deceit is most painful to me.

For instance, she hurries upstairs after meals, locks herself in and lights her fags. Then she will rush to the bathroom, wash out her mouth profusely, use strong-smelling tooth paste and then smear a slimy, powerfully-scented cold cream all over her face. After this, she comes down stairs again, confident that all trace of the smoke has been lost. But the first breath from her lungs gives her away. Tooth paste can't cleanse the lungs. Yet, even if it did, one whiff of her smoothed silken locks would reveal her secret, for hair quickly absorbs the smell of smoke and retains the odor indefinitely.

However, even if such tricks accomplished their purpose, I would still know when she is about to sneak a "drag." She will say, "Go down and play the piano for me, will you, dear?" Or, "Look through the paper and see what is new today." Or she will send me on some trivial mission that is sure to detain me long enough for her to have a smoke. Naturally, all these attempts at deception hurt me deeply. I have always been open and aboveboard with my wife, and I feel that she should reciprocate

Giving up this habit is the only concession I have ever asked of her; and her failure to do so has caused the only unpleasantness we have ever had. It grieves me greatly to think this habit has a hold on her that she cannot break; and that she would lightly disregard a promise made. I have been taught that promises are sacred; that they are binding. But to my wife, a promise evidently does not mean much; and I find it hard to reconcile myself to her attitude.

Yet in every other way she is the grandest wife in the world. I would not change her for any woman I know. I literally adore her. But, as I have said, her attitude toward this matter worries me. It makes me fear that in time I might lose my respect, regard and affection for her.

Therefore, what should I do in this predicament? Should I drop the whole matter, try to forget the deficiency and let her smoke her head off, as it were? Or should I again remind her of the solemn promise she made and ask her once more to adhere to it,—even though previous efforts have failed? Personally, I associate femininity with all things lovely and sweet. I like a woman undefiled by cigarette smoke.

I want your honest opinion on this, Miss Haworth. Don't pull your punches if you think I am in the wrong. I can take it. So please speak your mind. And, be your answer what it may, I still will feel that I have the grandest wife in the world, even though she is probably the most puzzling; —at least, to me.

BAFFLED HUSBAND.

Danger Threatens, Yes; But in Man's Attitude

DEAR B. H.: To the disinterested analyst of this impasse, it is clear that (a) your wife is acting well within her social prerogatives in smoking and continuing to smoke; whereas (b) you are considerably overstepping your social prerogatives in insistently making an issue of the habit. And it is also plain that her "tacit deceit" in the matter—a deceit which gives offense to your code of honor—is an involuntary protective reaction invoked by the pressure of your intrusively authoritarian attitude.

The primary trouble-making factor in the situation is your intensely emotional bias in re smoking. This is the condition which cries for remedy. The quality of this bias makes itself manifest, not alone in your assumption that "the open practice of smoking makes a woman look coarse and tawdry" (which, after all, is merely a projection of your personal viewpoint upon the world at large), but also, in your strong conviction and evangelical exhortation that smoking is detrimental to health.

I have conferred with two mental hygienists, whose respective educational backgrounds include full medical training, in process of formulating a substantial objective answer to your queries. And the immediate rejoinder of one of your statement of grievance was: "Oh, piffle!" The other said to me, "Well, I hope you DON'T pull your punches."

Smoking as a health hazard was discussed. Said one: "Moderate smoking is not as deleterious to health as conscientious objectors allege. There are no findings to sustain their alarming charges. While laboratory experiments show that nicotine in pure form does affect respiration and circulation, the effect of an occasional cigarette upon the smoker is something else again. It is much less harmful than the biased person believes. This is not to say that cigarettes are health-giving. But, rather, that a strong emotional bias against smoking tends to express itself in terms of unauthorized objections to the habit."

The other man considers your views "far-fetched." He said, "There is a vast difference between smoking a cigarette and taking a dose of nicotine. And while it is medically recognized that chronic heavy smoking is conducive of vascular (i. e., blood vessel) diseases in middle aged men of one particular racial heritage, it does not follow that the average moderate smoker is susceptible to the same effects."

Neither man shared your belief that smoking, in itself, "makes a woman look coarse and tawdry." They referred to the fact that smoking among women has become, during the twentieth century, "an accepted social custom" adopted by approximately 60 per cent of women in the Western world; and suggested that your revulsion to the spectacle is the psychological reflex of a man whose "ideal of womanhood" is borrowed from the past,—when the romantic accent was upon woman as the total social antithesis of man; instead of, as today, upon her honestly human qualities.

Thus, it appears (as I implied in the beginning) that the existing "predicament"—which you self-righteously attribute to your wife's alleged weak will and deceit—is definitely more indicative of greater shortcomings on your part than hers. It is a case of your being out of tune with the times —despite having married a woman who is casually attuned to them—and of having your toes unintentionally stepped on, and your sensibilities bruised, in consequence.

Obviously your wife has been more cooperative than you, in trying to reduce friction on the "sore point" to a minimum. In the extremity of her desire to please you, she at first tried to give up smoking; and, finding that impossible, resorted to "tacit deceit" to spare you distress. Whereas you, intent only on pleasing yourself, first "preach" her into an impracticable pledge; nextly drive her to defensive deceit; and finally puritanically impugn her character.

It well may be that this "issue" of your wife's surreptitiously smoking will gradually destroy your fine relationship with her. But if so, the destruction will have been wrought by the busybodyism of your attitude, and not by her half hysterical efforts to accommodate to it. In worrying about whether your respect, regard and affection for her may wane, you are overlooking the real danger that threatens. And that is: the possibility that your witch-hunting attitude may transmute her one-time love of you into legitimate, festering resentment—which may explode one day in the determination to leave you, in order to be free to "call her soul her own."

Good Posture Conserves Energy; Fatigue Caused by Slumping

By Ida Jean Kain

YOU can save your energy by going into training for good posture. You tire yourself unnecessarily by working with your body off balance.

There is only one posture rule to be kept in mind all the time. That is to pull up. Your lower abdominal muscles should be yanked up and your midriff stretched until this sector feels nice and firm. The upward pull should be so strong that you are automatically impelled to lift your chest and hold your head erect.

Stay Relaxed

But you should not hunch your shoulders or tense these muscles. To make sure that the shoulder girdle remains perfectly relaxed, let your arms hang down at the sides and shrug your shoulders loosely until you lose any feeling of tautness.

Everything you do is affected by your posture, even exercise. For good or bad, the way you stand is an exercise in itself. If you continually let your hips jut out as you swing your arms to straighten your shoulders, you may wind up with sway back. And if you let your abdominal girdle go slack as you bend over to supple your waist, you can't expect a flat front line.

The upward stretch and sideward bend are fine for slimming the waist, provided you do not offset the good of the exercise by hunching your shoulders. The slimming is not worth the tension. To stretch and bend in correct posture, stand with feet apart, pull up through the midriff and arc the arms overhead with elbows turned out at sides and clasp the hands. Watch yourself in the mirror and keep your shoulders down. Then bend slowly sideward without letting your figure lose its alignment.

Watch Posture

A specific exercise isn't specific unless you pay attention to your posture. The whole trick is to force one particular set of muscles to do some work and to keep the others out of the movement. If you let your hips swing around as you twist at your waist, you might as well quit. You are not getting any real work out of your waistline muscles. Here's the right way to do that exercise: Stand erect with your arms held straight out at the sides shoulder level, but with shoulders relaxed and down. Now, hold your hips squarely to the front as you twist at the waist.

Good posture isn't merely a pose you assume when you want to make a good impression. It is the position in which you work most efficiently. Give posture its due while you are exercising and make a habit of pulling up all the time.

Egg-Glycerine Shampoo For White Hair

If you're fortunate enough to have a head of snowy white hair as your crowning glory, you probably like to give it an egg shampoo occasionally. Here are the directions for one you might like to try which utilizes glycerine with other ingredients.

First of all, of course, the egg whites are beaten to a foamy froth. Then mix in two tablespoons of cool water; one teaspoon of glycerine; one teaspoon of borax; and eight tablespoons of bay rum. Dilute with six tablespoons of water.

Capital Whirl

Ann Bridge, Famous English Novelist, Pays Too Brief Visit to Capital

In town for a brief stay (far too brief—she'll be off again this afternoon) is Ann Bridge, noted novelist, who in private life is Mrs. Owen O'Malley, wife of the former British Minister to Hungary and now attached to the foreign office in London . . . Boston is temporarily her home, but she has been dashing about the country to fill lecture engagements recently; found herself in Philadelphia on Friday, and decided to come on to Washington to visit her old friend, Angus Malcolm, of the British Embassy, who entertained her husband here a few months ago.

Angus Malcolm

Author of the best-selling "Peking Picnic" and "Four Part Setting," Mrs. O'Malley recently put the finishing touches on her latest book, "Frontier Passage," which is scheduled for spring publication . . . and now she's serializing the story for a magazine . . . Her next book probably will be about Hungary . . . "I usually try to write about a country I know well, a year or so after I've left it," she said. "That's enough time for my impressions to settle down."

To Spend Week With Montgomerys

From Washington Mrs. O'Malley will go directly to Princeton, N. J., for a week's visit with the John Montgomerys (he's our former Minister to Hungary); then she'll proceed to Pittsburgh for a lecture, and a visit with relatives and after that she'll return to Boston, where she has taken an active part in defense work the past few months . . . Her current public speaking series will be over in April, and then she hopes to return to England to join her husband and their son and two daughters . . . The son, incidentally, is an R. A. F. bomber pilot. The elder daughter, Jane, is assistant editor of Time and Tide Magazine, and the other, Grania, has a job with the Ministry of Information . . . "Both are air-raid wardens, too," proudly added their famous mother, "so you see they've plenty to keep them busy."

Ann Bridge

Don't-we-all department: Mrs. Maxim Litvinov (who would much prefer that you not employ the usual diplomatic "Mme." before her name) is wide-eyed with wonder that the Washington press has been able to turn out so much copy about her . . . "I never saw anything like it," she told a reporter recently. "Why every time I pick up a newspaper I found out something else about myself, and usually it's all bosh" . . . Then, she added, twinkling, "Don't you journalists believe, at all, in the law of diminishing returns?"

'Phantom Ball' Goes on Calendar

About The Town: Latest project of the Navy Relief Society is its annual Phantom Ball ("the little ball that won't be there") scheduled of February 17 . . . Capable Mrs. James V. Forrestal, wife of the Navy Undersecretary, is in charge of publicity—so the success of the venture is already assured . . . Very much in demand as a public speaker these days is Countess Eleanor Palffy, who is in New York right now to fill a platform engagement. She'll talk before a meeting of the Colony Club this afternoon . . . Any Senator may take a bus ride occasionally, just for the fun of the thing, but Senator D. Worth Clark gets to Capitol Hill that way almost every day—and he loves it . . . Perhaps, if the tire shortage continues and riding in private cars is ruled out by public opinion, Vice President Wallace and all the Senators who live at Wardman Park Hotel will be boarding the special hotel bus that finds its way to Capitol Hill early each morning, long before most offices there are open.

Mrs. James V. Forrestal

SOCIETY IN A NOTE-SHELL: At a number of weekend parties teacup talk was enlivened considerably as guests gave themselves over to the Capital's latest indoor sport—the listing of "parasites" . . . Exactly what constitutes the latter still seems to be a debatable subject, but as well as I could make out—judging, of course, by the names I heard listed most often—a parasite seems to be almost anybody who (a) doesn't invite you to her (or his) parties; (b) hasn't accorded you some special attention; of (c) has disagreed with you about politics.

Rumors are making the rounds that the engagement of Isabel Meuser and Edwin Morrow O'Brien, of Charlottesville, Va., soon will be announced. She and her sister, Marjorie, made their bows here a few seasons ago under the aegis of their cousin, Arthur Bradley . . . Netherlands Foreign Minister Eelco Van Kleffens will be guest of honor when George Abell entertains at a 5-to-7 party on Thursday afternoon . . . Mrs. Emerson Howe will entertain on Sunday afternoon, and Mrs. Charles M. Lea will be hostess at a buffet supper that night . . . The William Littauers have invitations out for a dinner at the 1925 F Street Club on Monday, February 9 . . . and Lieut. and Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks, jr., will be guests of honor when Jack Seeger gathers in a few friends for cocktails on February 14.

Miss Jonsson Hopes to Give Concert on Next Visit Here

She has played beforethe chiefs of state in almost every country in Europe, but she's leaving Washington today after a week's stay without the Capital having had a chance to hear the Balkan music for which she is famous. But well-known Pianist Esther Jonsson promises that her next visit to Washington will include a concert appearance.

Now rushing back to Texas where her husband—in private life she is Mrs. Arthur Garlinghouse—is in service at Camp Bowie, Miss Jonsson promises a return trip to Washington soon. Arrangements had all been made some months ago, for the Yugoslavian Legatoin to present her in a concert of the music of their country, but several days before the concert was scheduled, Belgrade was bombed, and Yugoslavia was in the war.

Spending most of her seven years of musical study in Europe in specializing in Balkan music, Miss Jonsson brought back with her peasant songs of Central Europe never heard before in this country. "It's the most remarkable music I know," says she of the Yugoslavian folk music which is a combinaton of Greek, Slav and Turkish music. It is immediately popular with American audiences because it's "vigorous and there isn't one note too much," according to Miss Jonsson.

The pianist has her own theory of why Jugoslavs are reputedly one of the most vigorous and srongest nationalities of the lworld. "It's the Kolo," she explains. It seems the Kolo is a peasant dance engaged in by the hour Sunday afternoons in the Yugoslav villages. Everybody does this most energetic dance and if, after a few hours, a girl seems to tire, she is considered by the Yugoslav man to be unfit for wifehood. "It's just a musical interpretation of the survival of the fifittest," says Miss Jonsson.

Hollingsworths To Live in Md.

As soon as they can find an apartment, Mr. and Mrs. L. V. Hollingsworth, jr., who were married in Washington last weekend, will make their home in Baltimore. Mr. Hollingsworth is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hollingsworth, of Washington, and the wedding ceremony was performed at their home.

Mrs. Hollingsworth was the former Miss Mary Frances Wakefield, of Ashland, Ky. For her wedding she chose a three-piece brown suit which she wore with a light brown orchid. Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Vermillion attended the couple, who left immediately afterward for a weekend honeymoon in Richmond, Va.

Miss Smelser, Mr. Snead Wed

Now on a brief wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. William Marion Snead, who were married Wednesday in the Waugh Methodist Church, will make their home at 310 East Capitol Street upon their return.

The bride, who is the former Miss Sarah Vivian Smelser, daughter of Mrs. Gertrude Smelser, of Anderson, Ind., wore a corsage of gardenias and pink roses on her pale blue crepe dress at the ceremony at which the Rev. Samuel E. Rose officiated.

Miss Nora Woodward, the maid of honor and only attendant, wore a dress of rose-beige crepe with matching accessories and a corsage of talisman roses. Louis Neff, of Connecticut, served as best man.

Lieut. George Largess Weds Zoe McCombs In Ceremony at St. Matthew's Cathedral

Couple Leaves on Trip To North After Admiral Club Reception

St. Matthew's Cathedral was the scene of the wedding yesterday morning of Miss Zoe McCombs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Elbert McCombs, and Lieut. (junior grade) George Largess, son of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Largess, of Medford, Mass. The Rev. E. Robert Arthur officiated at the 11 o'clock ceremony in the church, which had been decorated with calla lilies and snapdragons for the occasion.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white satin, trimmed in seed pearls at the neckline and sleeves. A coronet of seed pearls held the veil which fell the length of the long train. Her bouquet was of orchids and white lilacs.

Frances Cox Is Attendant

Miss Frances Cox, the maid of honor, wore a full-skirted dress of pink satin made with a sweetheart neckline. Her hat was of American beauty net and she carried a bouquet of American beauty roses. The bridesmaids, Miss Betty Colburn, Miss Jane Del Vecchio, Miss Katharine Fulley, Miss Jean Nessell, Mrs. Eleanor Largess Register, a sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Jean Largess, another sister, wore dresses similar to that of the honor attendant in blue satin.

Lieut (junior grade) Allen Register served his brother-in-law as best man and the ushers were Ensign Robert Paddock, Ensign Ted Fuller, Ensign Harry Boisbert, Ensign James Fortiner, Ensign William Pellington and Ensign Richard Howard.

Reception Held At Admiral Club

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the Admiral Club. The bride's mother had chosen a frock of American beauty crepe with which she wore a matching hat and a corsage of orchids. When the couple left for their Northern wedding trip, the bride was wearing a blue fox jacket over a blue bengaline suit.

The bride attended Holton-Arms School and George Washington University, where she was a member of Pi Beta fraternity and Sigma Lambda. Her husband was graduated from the United States Naval Academy in 1939.

Marriage Announced

Cards have been received here from Mr. and Mrs. Clinton B. Penebaker, announcing the marriage of their daughter, Mary Rose, to Robert Cole on January 19, in Cleveland, Ohio, at St. Thomas Aquinas parish house. After a reception at Hotel Carter in Cleveland the couple left for Miami, Fla., by way of Washington. Mr. Cole was graduated from Yale in 1937 and is with the U. S. Navy, stationed in Miami.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The British Ambassador, Lord Halifax, arrived in New York yesterday from Washington and is staying at The Towers of the Waldorf-Astoria. Last evening he attended the fifty-fifth annual dinner of the Church Club, of New York, in the grand ballroom of the Waldorf.

The Chilean Ambassador, Rodolfo Michels, is in New York and is staying at the Waldorf. Senora de Michels and their daughter, Senorita Cristina Michels, will join the Ambassador in New York today for a week's stay and will be house guests of Senorita Paz Davila.

The French Ambassador, Gaston Henry-Haye, is now in New York and is stopping at the Towers of the Waldorf.

Mrs. John Allan Dougherty is now at the Sulgrave Club for an indefinite stay, having rented her apartment at 1868 Columbia Road.

Spending the week in New York, Mrs. Edwin B. Parker is visiting friends and attending the monthly meetings of the national Y. W. C. A. She is national chairman of the music committee of that organization.

Thomas Wharton Phillips, of Phillips Hall, Butler, Pa., and Washington, is at the Waldorf-Astoria while in New York to attend the wedding of his daughter, Mrs. Katharine Phillips van Hoorn, to Dr. Frederick L. Rutgers, of London, England. Mrs. Van Hoorn is the sister of Mrs. Leander McCormick-Goodhart, wife of the attache of the British Embassy here.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Gassenheimer left yesterday for Miami Beach, Fla., where they will spend some time at the Cadillac Hotel.

Patricia Lowe, Melvin J. Fox Are Engaged

Dr. and Mrs. E. A. Lowe announce the engagement of their daugher, Miss Patricia Lowe, to Melvin J. Fox, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Manuel Fox, of this city.

Miss Lowe attended school in England, France and Italy and also attended Wells College. Her father, who is of Oxford University and the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton, N. J., has been connected for many years wiht the Carnegie Institution of Washington and is an honorary consultant in paleography in the Library of Congress. Mrs. Lowe is also a noted scholar, having translated into English virtually all of Thomas Mann's writings under the pen name of H. T. Lowe-Porter. The bride-to-be is now working in the division of special information at the Library of Congress.

The prospective bridegroom attended Cornell University and was graduated from American University. His father is now in Chungking, where he is serving as the American member of the Chinese stabilization board. Prior to that he was on the board of the United States Tariff Commission. The bridegroom-elect is now an economist for the War Production Board.

The wedding will take place this spring.

Tea Will Aid The Cote Basque

The Sulgrave Club this Saturday afternoon will be the scene of a tea meeting sponsored by the Washington Committee on Aid for the Cote Basque. Mrs. Bentley Mott, wife of Gen. Mott, who is the founder of the relief organization, will address the group.

The committee is under the chairmanship of Princess Margaret Boncompagni and serving with her are the Countess de Marenches, Mrs. F. Burrall Hoffman, Miss Carolyn Nash, Mrs. Stedman Hanks of Boston, and Mrs. Eugene Villaret.

Mrs. Mott, who lived in France for more than 20 years while her husband served as Military Attache at the American Embassy in Paris, is best remembered for her work during the last war when, as Mlle. Georgette de Saint Paul, she was near the front and in charge of a canteen for American troops. For this work and for caring for the wounded she was awarded an American decoration by Gen. Charles P. Summerall, who at that time was Chief of Staff.

At the 4:30 o'clock meeting Saturday, she will tell of the work that is now being done and explain her plans to raise money to buy food for hungry French children on the Cote Basque, where she plans to have it distributed under her personal supervision.

Mrs. Royal Ingersoll Leaves Capital or Month's Vacation

Mrs. Royal E. Ingersoll, wife of Vice Commander Ingersoll, U. S. N., commander in chief of the Atlantic, left Washington on Sunday for a month's vacation trip. During her travels Mrs. Ingersoll will stop for a brief visit in New York City.

Miss Alice J. Ingersoll, their daughter, who made her debut here a season or so ago, is staying at the Washington College of Music during her mother's absence from town. Miss Ingersoll, who is on the staff of the college, expects to qualify for her Bachelor of Music degree next June. She has given various piano recitals, has been on the program at WWDC and will be heard over that station on Friday, February 13, in a Red Cross program.

The Ingersoll's have given up their home at 3009 Cathedral Avenue, and on Mrs. Ingersoll's return will move into an apartment at the Kennedy-Warren, at which time Mrs. Ingersoll will resume her activities with the Red Cross War Fund and the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club.

Admiral and Mrs. Ingersoll's former residence has been taken by Dr. and Mrs. Emery Olsen, who have recently come here from the West Coast, where Dr. Olsen was a doctor of philosophy at the University of Southern California. With them here are their two daughters.

Mrs. Waring To Be Guest Of the Holcombs

Mrs. Clarence Waring, of Charleston, S. C., and Geneva, N. Y., will arrive in Washington Friday, from Sarasota, Fla., and will be a house guest for several days of the commandant of the Marine Corps, Lieut. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, and Mrs. Holcomb at their quarters in the Marine Barracks.

Mrs. Waring, a connection by marriage of Gen. Holcomb's is en route to New York City, where she will visit briefly before going on to her home in Geneva.

On February 16, Mrs. Holcomb will be off by plane for the South, where she will remain for several weeks. While there she will visit her aunt, Mrs. George F. Clover at Coconut Grove, Miami, Fla., and also Mrs. Richard Cutts, sr., at Miami.

Miss Carolyn Holt. J. F. Head Engaged

Mrs. Frank Leslie Holt, of Little Rock, Ark., has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Carolyn Holt, to James Felton Head, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Felton Head, of Wilmington, N. C.

The wedding will take place on February 21 at the Sixth Presbyterian Church in Washington.

June Hanes Is Engaged

Of interest to Washington is the announcement of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Hanes, of Westerleigh, N. Y., of the engagement of Mr. Hanes's daughter, Miss June Hanes, to Ensign Henry T. McKnight, U. S. N. R., son of Sumner T. McKnight, of Minneapolis, Minn., and Mrs. C. Reinold Noyes, of New York and Unionville, Pa.

Miss Hanes was graduated from the Foxcroft School in 1935 and was introduced to society in New York and Baltimore during the 1936 season. Through her mother, the late Mrs. Hanes, who was the former Miss Agnes Mitchel, she is a granddaughter of Mrs. Ormsby MacKnight Mitchel, of Greenwich, Conn., and the late Mr. Mitchel. She is also the granddaughter of Mrs. John W. Hanes, of Winston-Salem, N. C., and the late Mr. Hanes. Her father, the former Undersecretary of the Treasury, is now associated with the United States Lines Co.

Ensign McKnight was graduated from St. Paul's School and from Yale University. A member of the Yale and Minneapolis Clubs, he is now stationed at the Naval Training Station at Great Lakes, Ill.

Miss Williard Is Honored by Miss Shelton

Miss Nancy Willard, who will marry Charles Henry Schaffert on Saturday, was the guest of honor last night at still another party. This one, a buffet-supper and personal shower, was given by Miss Martha Shelton in her home on Jocelyn Street.

Guests who gathered around the buffet-table, which was centered in a bouquet of white carnations and pink gladioli, were Miss Virginia Steuart, Miss Frances Bowie, Miss Barbara Richards, Miss Dorothy Phillips, Miss Ardith Brown, Miss Dorothy Selby, Miss Shirley Wilson, Miss Carol Loggins, Miss Ann Buchanan, Miss Virginia Tehas, Miss Alice Stribling, Miss Marian Dixon, Mrs. Boyd Frey, Mrs. Samuel Ross Miller, Mrs. William Adams and Mrs. Foster Faulkenstine.

Assisting the hostess were her mother, Mrs. Watson G. Shelton, and Mrs. Cassie S. Bardwell.

You Can Help Defense by Keeping Fit, Y. W. C. A. Official Stresses

IF YOU'RE worried about doing your bit for Uncle Sam, yet feel too exhausted to make the effort, look to your diet and exercises. This is the advice of Miss Irene Richards, director of health education at the Y. W. C. A.

"Keeping physically fit," she said, "ranks in importance with 'buying a bond' to help Uncle Sam. For, if you don't feel well, you cannot put the best into your regular wartime or voluntary defense job."

MISS IRENE RICHARDS

Exercise — calisthenics or sports — Miss Richards pointed out, not only gives you a fresh outlook but renews strength to continue the job that you must do daily. Lack of exercise and recreation, she believes, are largely responsible for nervous breakdowns of many new girls coming to Washington in defense jobs.

In addition to working hard with little or no recreation, she explained, the new girl are tried further by having to adjust themselves to new surroundings under trying conditions.

For real relaxation, Miss Richards recommends a daily swim. "If you don't know how," she said, "the age to learn to swim is the age you happen to be . . . no one is too old."

Walking is beneficial, she explained, only if you can walk on dirt—not pavement. Walking to and from work and from one office to another is sufficient to iron the kinks out a typist's neck and back.

Real physical fitness can be obtained only through exercise plus correct diet, according to Miss Richards. The Three Golden Rules of Nutrition prepared by the Woman's National Emergency Council in cooperation with scientists of the U. S. Government are stressed in connection with the Y. W. C. A.'s "Physical Fitness" daily classes. These rules are:

(1) A sound foundation for bouyant health can be built with seven ordinary foods—milk, seafood, bread with adequate vitamins, fruit, meat, eggs, green vegetables.

(2) See to it that your daily diet includes at least two or more glasses of milk, enriched bread or whole grain cereal or whole wheat bread, a tomato, orange, a grapefruit or their juices, a big helping of green vegetables and sometimes yellow ones, raw or lightly cooked.

(3) Unless your doctor has you on a special diet, eat everything else you like, including the necessary fats.

To meet the needs of new girls in defense jobs who need more exercise and recreation, the Y. W. C. A. gives daily special classes in physical fitness. The classes are arranged to meet shifting Government schedules. Those who enjoy exercises shared with dates can join groups in dancing, fencing and badminton, according to Miss Richards.

Doings of the Day

Cut Red Tape To Win War, Mrs. Taft Says

TO WIN the war, Mrs. Robert A. Taft advocates a "simpler and more streamlined war machine." Speaking before the members of the D. C. League of Republican Women at their meeting yesterday, she urged that all unnecessary red tape be cut to accelerate the war effort.

Pointing out that we had become the most powerful Nation in the world by our American ideas and ideals, Mrs. Taft warned that these must be guarded carefully during and after the war.

"Trouble begins," she said, "when we start importing ideas of government from foreign countries. We can't help the world progress by abandoning American ideals."

Defining the function of the Republican Party in the national crisis, Mrs. Taft declared her party's part is that of "eternal vigilance and constructive criticism."

"The concentration of the Republican (opposition) party," explained Mrs. Taft, upon war aims may be even more complete than that of bureaus and department heads in the Administration who are still likely to be pursuing the particular aims of isms with which they were concerned before the war broke.

"Never more than now has our Republic needed the Republican party. The function of an intelligent, loyal and courageous opposition never has been needed more than now, when the first aim of all good citizens is the winning of the war."

Lieut. Leo J. Nawn, Jr., Bride Honeymoon; To Live in Arlington

Soon to make their home at 2634 South Veitch Street, Arlington, Va., Lieut. and Mrs. Leo J. Nawn, jr., who were married Saturday afternoon in the chapel of Fort Myer, Va., are now on a brief honeymoon trip.

The bride, who formerly was Miss Phoebe Tolheim, of Birmingham, Ala., is the daughter of Mrs. Edward J. Head, of New York, and James B. Tolheim. Given in marriage by her father, she wore a white satin gown trimmed in chantilly lace and carried a bouquet of white orchids.

Miss Helen Linnehan, of New York, the maid of honor and only attendant, topped her ice blue satin gown with a veiled coronet of ostrich tips. Her bouquet was of talisman roses.

Lieut. James Buckley served as best man and the ushers were Lieut. Fred J. Hughes, jr., Lieut. Leslie J. Cross, Lieut. Ralph Foster, Lieut. Patrick Hyslop, Lieut. Earle Kelley and Lieut. John Emery.

Following the 4:30 o'clock ceremony, there was a reception at Fort Myer. The bride's mother wore a dove-blue crepe gown with matching accessories and her grandmother, Mrs. G. B. McVay, of Houston, Tex., wore an ensemble of burgundy crepe. The mother of the bridegroom, Mrs. Leo J. Nawn, of Boston, chose a dubonnet crepe frock with which she wore turquoise blue accessories and a silver fox muff.

The bride, who has won many awards for horsemanship in Virginia and Maryland, was graduated from Arlington Hall. Her husband is a graduate of Norwich University.

Miss Anne Mitchell To Be Wed in Spring

Mr. and Mrs. H. Morsell Mitchell, of Chevy Chase announce the engagement of their daughter, Anne, to John Jerome Rooney, 2d, of this city. The bride-elect attended Wilson Teachers' College and is the great-granddaughter of the late Commodore Levi D. Slamm, U. S. N.

The wedding will take place Easter week.

F. L. Meisners To Live in N. Y.

Making their home in New York are Mr. and Mrs. Frank Leonard Meisner, who were married Saturday at the Calvary Baptist Church.

The bride, who was formerly Miss Nelle Shannon, daughter of George Timothy Shannon, of this city, was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of hyacinth blue taffeta under a veiled coronet of matching material. Her bouquet was of yellow roses and baby's breath.

Miss Grace Shannon, a sister of the bride and her only attendant, wore a dress of nile green brocade and carried a bouquet of talisman roses. Perry Toncill served as best man.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the Lee Sheraton Hotel after which the newlyweds left for New York.

The bride attended Ohio University where she was a member of Phi Delta Gamma and Delta Sigma Epsilon sororities. Her husband attended the same university where he was a member of Lamba Chi Alpha fraternity.

Robert Gray Twists Making Home Here

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gray Twist are now making their home in Washington, following their marriage January 30 in the rectory of St. Mary's Catholic Church. The Rev. Simon E. Kenney officiated.

Mrs. Twist is the former Miss Mary Verona Fleigh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Fleigh, of Hagerstown, Md. Mr. Twist is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis B. Twist, of Canandaigua, N. Y.

Iceland Cold Only in Name, Says Minister

"My son and I were in Iceland in 1929. We went from place to place eating that wonderful salmon. Oh, yes, that was the year before the celebration of our 1000th meeting of Parliament."

It was Mrs. Claude Swanson reminiscing with the Minister of Iceland, Thor Thors, at the tea given in his honor yesterday afternoon by the Newspaper Women's Club. Mrs. Thors—the "h" isn't pronounced but the "s" is—stood with her husband and the president of the club, Mrs. Marie McNair, to receive.

Dropping in "after 5" yesterday afternoon to meet the first minister Iceland has sent to this country and his attractive wife were Mrs. Henry L. Stimson, wife of the Secretary of War, who was an early arrival; Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, who felicitated Mrs. Swanson on her recovery from a recent illness; Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Perry Heath, Mrs W. E. P. French, Mrs. Luther Sheldon, jr., Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie and a number of others.

"The coldest thing about Iceland is its name," asserted the minister as he explained to the gathering that his native country had milder winters than New York and moderate temperatures the year 'round. "For which we thank America and her Gulf Stream," he added.

Giving a brief resume of the history of his country, the minister explained its democratic traditions and ways of government. He told the story of the noted student of democratic institutions who, after watching the Icelandic government at work, exclaimed, "Well, if, as they say, England is the mother of parliament, Iceland is certainly the grandmother of parliament."

Explaining the way in which Iceland regards the posting of protective troops of England and America on her shores, Mr. Thors asserted that Iceland, "the smallest of the democracies," had taken her position with the other democracies of the world on the basis of treaties and would after the war revert to its completely independent status.

"I know you're all interested in how Iceland feels about the American troops there," the minister continued. According to Mr. Thors, Iceland is delighted to have them there, but, naturally—it is the same, proportionately, as if five million men suddenly moved into New York—there is the law of supply and demand.

"I do not think I would be betraying a military secret if I told you what your President said to me during my first audience with him,' twinkle'd the minister. "We were discussing the problems that such an influx would necessarily create and he said, "Its no't your fault that your Icelandic girls are so pretty!"

17,000 OF MY PALS NEED YOUR HELP

I'M the Police Officer on your beat. I'd like to say a few words to you about the 17,000 kids who now call us fellows "pal."

Before the Police Boys' Club was organized these kids didn't think of my fellow officers and me as their "pals." To them, we were the "cops" who interfered with their fun.

But, that's all changed now. 17,000 of these boys have found that it's much more fun to be sturdy than to be tough. They get their kick out of the basketball games and the boxing bouts, and all the other group activities arranged for them by experienced supervisors.

They learn to use their heads and hands to do something besides get into trouble. And, they like it.

That's why more and more kids are choosing the Police Boys' Club instead of the street gang.

In wartime it's more important than ever that the work of building decent, law-abiding boys continue. The less trouble we have at our own doorstep the more effort we will muster to beat the enemy.

All police officers have much more to do today than during peace times. That's why we're asking you to give your contribution to the civilian who will call upon you.

He has volunteered to take time from his business or his family to present the cause for the boys. Give him a courteous hearing and be ready to support the Police Boys' Club, wholeheartedly.

AND, ABOVE ALL, DON'T WITHHOLD YOUR CONTRIBUTION BECAUSE THE SOLICITOR DOESN'T WEAR A BLUE UNIFORM. THE POLICE OFFICER ON YOUR BEAT HAS OTHER ASSIGNMENTS.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Workers Who Move Will Get Graduated Per Diem

Melvyn Douglas, the movie actor, who is to be appointed director of information at OCD is an all-out Roosevelt man. He organized a committee of movie people to work for the reelection of the President during the 1940 campaign.

A delegation from Kansas City is lobbying to get Farm Credit Administration sent to its city. The lobbyists are certain FCA will be decentralized . . . The Public Health Service was given a few hours notice to get out of its handsome building on Constitution Avenue between Nineteenth and Twentieth Streets. It's being moved across the street into the old Naval Hospital buildings. It's rumored that one of the allied commissions will take over Public Health's building . . . War chiefs still have their eyes on Interior Secretary Ickes' fine new building in the same neighborhood.

Library of Congress went on a 44-hour week yesterday. So did the State Department . . . Commerce employes may be given 45 minutes for lunch which would release them 15 minutes later, or at 5:15. War releases its employes at 5 o'clock which makes a terrific traffic tie-up . . . There's quite a difference of opinion at General Accounting Office on whether its employes should be placed on a 44-hour week. So far the work week hasn't been extended but several of the high-ups are promoting a 44-hour week . . . Maj. James E. Hatcher, former chief of Civil Service investigations, is attending the Army infantry school at Fort Benning, Ga.

The Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance may not go to Baltimore after all. Office space has been found there but a survey shows very few available homes. And if the move is made to Baltimore it's feared the 1800 employes will keep their homes here and commute. . . . National Parks Service, which was ordered to Chicago, is considering the possibility of moving to Luray, Va. The agency is making a home survey at Luray . . . Federal Works will appoint six regional directors to coordinate the work of its constituent agencies. They'll be located at Kansas City, New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Fort Worth and Atlanta. Some suspect this is a beginning of FWA regionalization.

The 10,000 Federal workers who will be decentralized along with their dozen agencies won't all get $75 in per diem for 15 days. In fact, very few will get it. Here's the scale: Employes, whether single or married, who don't move dependents to the new locations within six months will get just four days per diem, or $20. Employes who move their dependents within six months will get: six days, or $30, if they move not more than 50 miles; ten days, or $50, if the move is between 50 and 150 miles, and 15 days, or $75, if the move is more than 150 miles.

Budget Bureau also has decreed that per diem won't be paid employes who transfer to the decentralized agencies in order to get out of the city. However, Uncle Sam will foot the bill for their own travel and he will move their household goods . . . USHA's four regional offices will be moved out of Washington by February 22 . . . Wage and Hour is slated to move to New York on February 14 but unless an administrator is appointed within the next few days very few of the agency's employes will transfer with it. The employes are promoting Tom Holland, now acting administrator.

The President wasn't kidding when he pointed out the other day that he had authority to take over private buildings here. Plans are in the works now for the Government to take over several large private buildings. Private industry here will be decentralized along with the Government . . . Representative Earl Wilson, the curfew man, reports that a stenographer told him yesterday that she wrote one letter last week and she had to request the work. After hearing from the employes, he's preparing to blast Government straw bosses and supervisors.

4,200,000 Jobless During January

The ranks of the unemployed rose by 400,000 during January, increasing the jobless to 4,200,000, according to the monthly report of unemployment released yesterday by the Works Progress Administration.

The sharp decrease in employment was accounted for by seasonal factors in agriculture and retail trade, and economic dislocation resulting from the war.

One for All

A waitress serving coffee over a Washington lunch counter began doling out the sugar.

"But I don't want any sugar," protested a customer.

"You get one spoonful," the girl explained, dipping into the bowl. "Everybody gets a spoonful of sugar. That's rationing orders."

Finds a Tire—and Tells

Cab Driver E. S. Haley emerged yesterday as a hero of the rubber shortage. He found a precious automobile tire, wheel and all, in the middle of Forty-fifth Street Northwest yesterday, and what does he do? He announces that the owner may claim same by identifying it at his home, 1108 B Street Northeast, any morning.

Bill Offered To Control Garage Rents

House District Committee Approves Measure to Create City Parking Lots

A bill placing garage rents under control of the District rent administrator was introduced yesterday, as the House District Committee approved a Senate-passed measure to create municipal parking lots here.

The committee, digging into the Capital's acute traffic and transportation problems, also heard and took under consideration the following proposals:

Releasing of regular police from building and plant protection duties by substitution of volunteer home guards, civilian auxiliary police, soldiers, and Federal employes.

Use of "taxi scrip" for Federal workers and substitution of cabs for Government autos.

Forand Offers Rent Bill

Representative Aime J. Forand (Democrat), of Rhode Island, introduced a bill making rents in both public and private garages subject to the control of the rent administrator. The action came shortly after Representative Thomas Ford (Democrat), of California, testified before the House District Committee that the monthly rent for his garage had recently been boosted from $12.50 to $17.50 and suggested garage rent regulation.

The fringe parking bill, which was approved by the House District Committee yesterday, provides for the creation of a motor vehicle parking agency, responsible to the District Commissioners, with the job of buying and operating parking lots along the fringes of the downtown area.

Washington I. Cleveland, District American Automobile Association manager, told the committee that the resources of the police force have been drained away by wartime need to guard buildings, bridges and other critical points, aggravating the traffic problem here. He urged an increase in traffic and motorcycle police.

Kutz Suggests Home Guard

Proposals for increasing the police force by releasing them from building protection duties included:

Creation of a volunteer home guard, suggested by Brig. Gen. Charles Kutz, Engineer Commissioner.

Requiring the Federal agencies and the Army to protect the buildings, suggested by Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana.

Assignment of civilian auxiliary police to supplement regular police, suggested by Sidney R. Katz, vice president, District C. I. O. Industrial Union Council.

The "taxi scrip" plan was presented by Thomas G. Early, executive officer, Office of the Coordinator of Information. Under the plan, Government autos would be abandoned and authorized employes would be provided with scrip books for cab fare.

Authority of the Public Utilities Commission to regulate taxicabs was the subject of considerable debate at the hearing, but the expected "spanking" of Gregory J. Hankin, of the PUC, by Schulte, was temporarily deferred.

Plan Called "Joke"

Crux of the controversy was the proposed rush hour taxi-jitney service which Hankin has approved for a trial period of 30 days, starting February 9. Schulte has described the plan as "the biggest joke in the country."

Harry S. Wender, vice president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, indorsed Hankin's jitney service idea as a needed "experiment." He also expressed the opinion that the power of the PUC over taxicabs should be increased.

Edwin A. Glenn, president of the Cab Drivers Union, said that most cab drviers fear the jitney service proposal will create confusion and have planned a protest mass meeting for tomorrow night at Roosevelt High School.

At the close of the hearing, Randolph said that additional hearings would be held on the transportation problem in the near future. Schulte said that he would then formally present his views on Hankin's conduct of the P. U. C.

Guild Meets Tonight

Early to Bed, Early to Rise

Rep. Wickersham Defends Government Girls, Rep. Wilson Draws Up Efficiency Program

THE PRIMP ACT—Representative Early (to bed and early to rise) Wilson demonstrates how it is driving him frantic to see so many Government girls primping on Federal time. Wilson contends the girls get home too late to be bright and early on the job. His remedy is a 10 o'clock curfew for Government girls. Playing the part of the girl who came in with the milkman is Ethel Dameron (right), while Alice Fisher tends to her work

Barber Shop Bill Approved By Committee

Over the objections of a Seventh Day Adventist minister, the House District Committee yesterday approved unchanged the bill introduced by Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, to establish uniform opening and closing hours for District barber shops.

The measure provides for a referendum of District barbers to establish by majority consent opening and closing hours and one day a week on which all barber shops must be closed. Persons who wish to remain closed on a day different from the one selected by majority vote may do so, under the bill, if they present an affidavit declaring that they are motivated by religious considerations.

The Rev. C. S. Longacre, secretary of the Religious Association of America, said he presumed that most barbers would vote to close on Sunday, thus discriminating against groups who observe the Sabbath on another day, such as the Seventh Day Adventists, who observe Saturday. By requiring persons who want to close on Saturday to subscribe to an oath setting forth their religious beliefs, the bill discriminates against them, he said.

Charles K. Bovello, former president of the barbers' union, asserted that many barbers now work unusually long hours, thus endangering their health and the health of their customers. An outbreak of disease in one District hospital was finally traced to the hospital barber shop, he asserted.

Harwood of FBI Kills Self in N. Y.

New York, Feb. 2 (AP).—Ronald J. Harwood, 26, an agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation attached to the New York office, shot himself to death today in a washroom on the twenty-ninth floor of the FBI office.

P. E. Foxworth, agent in charge of the FBI office here, said he knew of no reason for Harwood's act and that Harwood had a good record with the FBI which he joined November 12, 1940.

Harwood listed his legal address with the FBI as Bisbee, Ariz. He was a graduate of Arizona State College and had done graduate work at George Washington University. He was married and his wife lives at Elmhurst, N. Y.

Fairfax Election Today

Fairfax County, Va., voters today will elect a Delegate to the Virginia General Assembly in a special election to fill the vacancy caused by the death January 14 of Col. R. R. Farr.

Candidates are John A. K. Donovan and Robert J. McCandlish, both Democrats.

Oklahoman Declares They Should Be Allowed To Retire When Ready

A "gentleman of the Southwest," who has been in Congress since April, yesterday came to the defense of girls in Government service and said they "had good reputations . . . and should be allowed to go to bed when they get ready."

The gallant Congressman was Victor Wickersham (Democrat), of Oklahoma, who was elected to fill the unexpired term of the late Sam C. Massingale.

His speech on the House floor was an answer to Representative Earl Wilson (Republican), of Indiana, who had proposed that Government girls be subjected to a curfew which would compel them to get home early each night—perhaps as early as 10 p. m.

Early to Bed, Early to Rise

Yesterday, Wilson, undaunted by this and other rebuffs, turned to writing poetry in defense of the curfew. The poem was a reply to Eileen V. McBride, employe of the Federal Works Agency, who had previously dedicated a protesting bit of verse to Wilson:

"Early to bed and early to rise
Will help your complexion and brighten your eyes!"

—Wilson wrote.

Miss McBride had written:

"The incentive to show efficiency plus
Is killed in the struggle to get to the bus."

Wickersham said he was "speaking for the peace of mind of the folks back home." He pointed out that under the war time saving law which goes into effect next week the girls would be compelled to go to bed an hour earlier than Wilson had suggested.

Ten-Point Efficiency Program

Miss McBride's poem and Wickersham's speech seemed to stimulate Representative Wilson further. Late yesterday he made public the text of a ten-point "efficiency" program which he will use as the basis for a speech on the House floor today.

Representative Wilson's ten points follow:

1. Removal of employes from overstaffed departments.
2. Removal of inefficient employers and employes.
3. Training of incoming employes somewhere outside Washington.
4. Doubling up of shifts.
5. Removal of "parasites" from Washington.
6. Compulsory use of elaborate living quarters not now contributing to national defense.
7. Government seizure and use of social clubs not contributing to national defense.
8. Mass decentralization of non-defense agencies.
9. Utilization of all available help in the District, including retired men and women.
10. A substantial building program.

The Indianan, originally a schoolmaster, advanced his curfew suggestion last week at a meeting of the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee which was considering a 50 million dollar defense housing program for the District. The committee will have another meeting today on the same subject.

Mrs. Mary T. Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, will present her views on a proposed measure to provide additional hospital facilities for the District at the session.

Missionary From D.C. Held By Japanese

The Rev. Claude L. Pickens, of Washington, on missionary duty in China since 1926, has been taken prisoner by the Japanese and interned at Hankow, it was learned last night in advices reaching Episcopal missionary headquarters in New York.

There was no word as to the whereabouts of his wife and five children, or of his brother, the Rev. Henry Pickens, also a missionary, who arrived in Manila only a few days before its capture by the Japs.

The parents of the two missionaries, Mr. and Mrs. Claude L. Pickens, of 133 Webster Street Northwest, were inclined to be hopeful.

They said that Mrs. Claude Pickens and children, ranging from 7 to 15 years of age, had been living in Chefoo, about 600 miles from Hankow, where the missionary was stationed.

The Rev. Henry Pickens, who is 33 and his brother's junior by nine years, had gone to China in 1937 and was in Manila en route back to Washington on his first leave, when the war broke out.

His wife, Elizabeth, who with their 2-year-old baby lives at 1474 Columbia Road Northwest, last heard from him by cable on Christmas Day. But there has been no word since. The Pickenses here hope he escaped from Manila to Australia with other refugees.

Natives of Alexandria.

Both Claude and Henry were born in Alexandria and attended McKinley High School here.

Claude was graduated from Michigan University in 1923 and spent three more years at the Episcopal Seminary in Alexandria. He served as pastor of Good Shepherd Church here and was assistant pastor of the Rock Creek Parish before leaving for China. He and his family last visited here three years ago.

Henry went to George Washington University and was graduated from the Alexandria Seminary in 1937. He was stationed at Shanghai, and his wife and child returned here to live about a year ago.

The father of the missionaries, Claude, sr., is treasurer of Rock Creek Cemetery, and well known in Episcopal circles here.

The advices telling of Henry's internment in Hankow, stated that six other Episcopal missionaries had been interned with him. They are:

The Right Rev. Alfred A. Gilman, Bishop of Hankow, of North Platte, Neb.; Louise Reilly, superintendent of nurses of the Church General Hospital, of Cleveland; Winifred Steward, business manager, of Boston; Nina Johnson, of Alburgh, Vt.; Olive B. Tomlin, teacher, of Northampton, Mass., and the Rev. Robert E. Wood, Batavia, N. Y.

Two Escape Burning Launch; Wax Fire Imperils Garage

Two occupants of a motor boat that caught fire on the Potomac River yesterday moved the craft 50 feet to shore without injury to themselves, then stood safely by watching it burn to the waterline.

The two, H. F. Gray, 1309 Concord Avenue Northwest, the boat's owner, and S. A. Thomas, 5912 Fourteenth Street Northwest, had gone on a pleasure jaunt down the river Sunday. The boat's motor went dead near Fort Foot, opposite Alexandria, and it was left tied up.

The two returned yesterday and moved the boat out into the stream when gasoline ignited in the bilge, starting the fire.

An electric welding torch ignited oil soaked timbers of Dock No. 3 at the Navy Yard yesterday, causing a slight blaze. Ten pieces of city firefighting apparatus responded, along with the District fireboat and Navy Yard apparatus.

The sudden flare of flames caused by the explosion of wax and other ingredients used in machine paper boxes on the second oor in the rear of 1414 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest, brought out seven Washington fire companies after two alarms were turned in at 9:25 p. m. yesterday.

The burning wax spread over the entire second floor but the fire was extinguished 15 minutes after the fire fighters arrived.

A police motorcycle driven by Private H. K. Holsinger, of the traffic department, on his way to the fire, was wrecked at Ninth and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest when it collided with a car driven by Edward D. George, 28, of 803 E Street Southwest. Police reported Holsinger was unhurt and that George was charged with failure to grant the right of way.

Kelly Lauds Revamped Police Force

Police Chief Calls For 100 Increase To Assure Better Protection for City

The recent outstanding work of his force, particularly in fighting crime here, was given public praise yesterday by Maj. Edward Kelly, superintendent of police, in a talk before the Dupont Circle Citizens Association in the Mayflower Hotel.

He said that careful study had been made of the department since he took office on August 15 with the object of reorganizing the entire personnel so as to insure continued efficient service, but that the imposition of additional duties because of the war emergency had slowed up the reorganization.

Kelly said he hoped that Congress would appropriate additional funds so that 100 men might be added to the force.

"We need more police," Kelly said, "and we need them badly."

The police chief also discussed the police auxiliary and invited members of the association to volunteer.

Following Kelly's talk, association members, presided over by Harral Mulliken, vice resident, questioned Kelly on the operation of the Police Department.

Manor Park

Opposition to the proposed increase in limited bus service fares and a proposal that a second cross-town bus route be established came out of last night's meeting of the Manor Park Citizens Association in Whittier School.

The bus fare increase, which would hike the present price of six tokens for 50 cents to a flat rate of 10 cents each, was attacked as unnecessary and discriminatory against the residents of that section in a resolution which suggested that the Public Utilities Commission determine whether the "present service" rendered by the Capital Transit Co. warrants the "high salaries" paid officials of that company.

A second resolution, which like the first will be forwarded to the P. U. C., urges the establishment of a cross-town bus route from the Silver Spring-Takoma area via Blair Road and the Taylor Street Bridge to Bladensburg Road.

Endeavorers Hear Dr. Paul Douglass At Their Banquet

America's Christian youth faces the responsibility of uniting the world's idealisms under the Cross of Jesus Christ, Dr. Paul F. Douglass, president of American University, said last night.

He addressed the annual District Christian Endeavor banquet at Albright Memorial Evangelical Church, Fourth and Rittenhouse Streets Northwest. It climaxed Christian Endeavor Week, marking the sixty-first anniversary of the founding of the world Endeavor movement.

Warning of the dangers of the world's peoples "sliding back into tribal solidarity," Dr. Douglass said American youth was the only hope for continuing the missionary zeal and tolerance that characterizes the Christian religion. The speaker was presented by the Rev. Harry V. Porter, pastor of Westminster Memorial Presbyterian Church and toastmaster.

Among other guests were James Richards, president of the District Senior Union; Maj. Guy Withers, who claims to be the oldest local Endeavorer in point of service, having joined in 1884, and Miss Pauline Shiemaker, associate president of International Endeavor and former local president.

Groups to Attend Chevy Chase Civil Defense Meeting

Several organizations will cooperate with the Chevy Chase civilian defense committee in the mass meeting which it will sponsor tomorrow at 8 p. m. in Woodrow Wilson High School, it was announced last night.

They include citizens' associations of that area, the Chevy Chase Business Association, the E. V. Brown and Lafayette Home and School Association, the Blessed Sacrament School and the National Cathedral Post of the American Legion.

Col. Lemuel Bolles, director of the District Defense Council, and Chief Air Raid Warden Clement Murphy will address the meeting and, after the speeches, a defense film will be screened and a demonstration given on fighting magnesium bombs.

War's Effect Here Basis Of Study

A study of the economic and social effect of wartime activities on Washington will be undertaken by a special committee of the Board of Trade, it was announced yesterday.

The announcement was made by Fred Smith, president of the board, following a directors' meeting. Joseph McGarraghy was named chairman of the survey group, which numbers 70 local business and professional men.

Smith said the committee, after its investigation, will suggest ways and means by which business and professional residents may be instrumental in alleviating conditions brought on by war activities.

The special committee will hold its first meeting February 5 in the Board of Trade Offices. Members of the group are:

Bruce R. Allen, John K. Althaus, L. L. Altmann, Earl D. Baker, J. S. Bartlett, Wilfred H. Blanz, Louis L. Bowdler, A. J. Brylawski, George B. Burrus, Edmund O. Carl, Leon Chatelain, jr., James E. Colliflower, Col. Lawrence C. Crawford, B. B. Derrick, William B. Dolph, B. B. Earnshaw, Edward H. Evans, Dr. D. J. Fitzsimmons, Gerald D. Grosner, John J. Hasley, Arthur B. Heaton, T. Volunteers Sought in Boys' Club Campaign

The Metropolitan Police Boys Club, now engaged in its annual financial campaign, sent out a call last night for more volunteer solicitors.

"The real problem of the campaign," according to Ralph Goldsmith, chairman of the campaign committee, "is to reach all those in Washington who want to contribute to this work for deserving boys. There are so many prospective donors that we could use several hundred men and women in addition to those who are already at work.

"If we could get people," he said, "to undertake to visit only a few of their friends it would greatly expedite the completion of the drive."

Goldsmith's appeal for more solicitors was issued as early reports from the hundreds of workers already in the field showed a ready response to the request for $100,000 needed to finance the five clubs of the organization.

Goldsmith said he expected a "satisfactory report" when campaign workers hold their first report luncheon Friday at the National Press Club auditorium.

The citizens' unit, under Kirk Miller, which has charge of the solicitation in residential areas, is particularly in need of additional workers. Persons wishing to volunteer are asked to get in touch with campaign headquarters at 2020 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest. The telephone number is Hobart 7221.

A. F. L. Civilian Defense Fund Rises to $50,000

Pledges for the A. F. of L. Central Labor Union civilian defense fund for the District have risen to $50,000, it was announced last night at a meeting of the A. F. of L. assembly here. The Central Labor Union is seeking to raise $70,000 for civilian defense by March 2.

It was announced that four blood bank outfits have been ordered for District hospitals, and that five others would be purchased, if needed. Representatives of affiliated unions promised that their organizations would supply ample blood donors.

The assembly also agreed to purchase air raid warden films, for distribution among local theaters and mobile kitchens for emergency feedings.

Women and 2 Men Die on Central Ave.; Injuries on Saturday Fatal to Another

Traffic deaths to date in 1942 .. 15
Traffic deaths same date 1941 .. 13
Total traffic deaths 1941 95

Two men and a woman were killed, and another man was injured seriously in a head-on collision in the 5000 block of Central Avenue Northeast at 4:20 a. m. yesterday. Meanwhile, another man died of injuries suffered in an accident on Saturday.

HARRIS

The three persons killed were: Franklin A. Harris, 23, of 306 Carmody Road, Seat Pleasant, Md./ Mrs. Lillian M. Fleischhauer, 35, 423 Fifth Street Northeast and Robert W. Stanner, 34, of Berwyn, Md. The person hurt was John Leonard, 40, of Hillside, Md. He was taken to Casualty Hospital with a fractured right leg, lacerations of his scalp and shock.

3-Way Collision

Saturday's victim, George Edelin, 21, of 1638 Montello Avenue Northeast, died at Casualty Hospital. He was injured in a three-car collision near Beltsville, Md., and was the second person to die as a result of this accident. The other victim, Miss Olean Prince, 18, 1121 Holbrook Terrace Northeast, died Saturday at the same hospital.

In yesterday's accident, Harris, according to police, was eastbound on Central Avenue, driving on the wrong side of the road, when he ran into a car driven by Leonard in the opposite direction. Mrs. Fleischhauer was a passenger in Leonard's car, it was said, and Stanner was a passenger in Harris' car.

Mrs. Fleischhauer was the widow of Julius Fleischhauer, a Fifth Precinct policeman, who was killed last July in an accident at Triangle, Va.

Harris and Mrs. Fleischhauer were pronounced dead at the scene by Dr. Joseph Palumbo, of Casualty Hospital. Stanner was removed to Casualty, where he died shortly before noon.

Car Pins Men to Wall

About 1:35 p. m. yesterday two men were pinned against a brick wall by a runaway automobile. Both legs of one man were broken, and one leg of the other. The car, a 1942 Cadillac sedan, was reported to have been occupied by Dr. Laura A. Killingsworth, 47, of 1509 S Street Northwest.

According to witnesses, police said, Dr. Killingsworth was alone in her car parked in the 600 block of D Street Northwest on the north side of the street. Suddenly, they said, her motor began to roar and the car darted to the opposite side of the busy thoroughfare, and across the sidewalk into the two pedestrians.

Those injured were John H. Owen, 34, both legs broken, and Davis Pomerantz, 46, one leg broken. Both live at the Gordon Hotel. All were taken to Casualty Hospital, where the wo men were admitted. Dr. Killingsworth suffered head injuries, but refused to remain at the hospital.

Mr. Goldwyn Explains About That Gehrig Film

'Pride of the Yankees' Not 'Baseball Picture;' Sammy Kaye Gets the Nod Two Weeks Running; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

ALL RIGHT, SO IT IS A PUBLICITY "STUNT."

Nevertheless, so many sports pages, so many baseball fans and so many commentators-at-large have put in their 2 cents' worth pro and con on the subject that it seems pertinent to reproduce verbatim the letter dated Los Angeles, January 29, over the personal signature of Samuel Goldwyn. So here it is:

SAMUEL GOLDWYN

"Dear Mr. Bell: On February 2 I will start shooting 'The Pride of the Yankees,' starring Gary Cooper as Lou Gehrig.

"I have never produced a picture which has received so much public interest in advance or invited so many letters of suggestion and comment.

"There are, however, several misapprehensions which have gained circulation with regard to the picture which I feel it may be well to set right.

"First of all, 'The Pride of the Yankees' is not to be, in a strict sense, a 'baseball picture.' There are several factors, important though they may be, which have never been major considerations in the making of this picture. I have not been motivated, for example, by the fact that baseball is America's greatest sport, that no ambitious motion picture has ever been made with big league baseball as its background, or that 1941 was 'baseball's greatest year.'

"The one thing that moved me to make this picture was the story of Lou Gehrig, the man. It is one of the most inspiring and, at the same time, tragic stories I have ever known. It is true. It is life. It is the highly dramatic and truly American success story of the son of a janitor and a fraternity house cook, both German immigrants. Lou Gehrig washed dishes to pay his way through college. He was not a 'born ball player,' but struggled toward mastery in a sport for which originally he had no particular aptitude. His story is the story of this struggle, of his first romance and the girl he married. It is a story in which life itself is the villain, giving Lou Gehrig everything a man could hope for and then snatching it away.

A Moving Chapter in Sports

"There has never in the history of sport been as moving a chapter as the events leading up to the July 4th, in 1939, when Lou Gehrig, faltering in step and speech, stood up to a microphone in Yankee Stadium and, with tears streaming down his face, said to the 60,000 people who had come to cheer him for the last time, 'I feel today that I am the luckiest man on the face of the earth.'

"Baseball is simply the backdrop for this story which is, in a broad sense, the story of the opportunities that America offers every boy and of the whims with which life sometimes favors a few and then destroys them.

"I feel that it would be something less than keeping faith with the thousands of baseball fans who idolized Lou Gehrig, and the millions of others who admired this man, to make 'The Pride of the Yankees' anything less than the finest possible tribute that can be created to his memory. It is with this purpose that we enter upon production of the picture. Sincerely (signed), SAMUEL GOLDWYN."

If for no other reason, one suspects that Sam Goldwyn wrote that letter himself because it contains none of the malapropisms so generally attributed to him and of which he is so seldom guilty. I have never heard one fall from his shrewd lips from the old silent days, when he was eager to receive suggestions as to how Will Rogers might be made more popular with the "movie fans," down to the present. The coming of sound to the screen took care of the Rogers problem, incidentally. All he needed was to be heard as well as seen. And it seems to me, too, that since Mr. Goldwyn is going to make the sort of film outlined in his brief from the life of Lou Gehrig, the selection of Gary Cooper for the title role is, as Mr. G. has insisted from the outset, as good as could be made. And, thanks, to our Mr. Povich, I go to a baseball game, now and again, myself.

An Extracurricular Broadcast

The customers fortunate enough to get into the Earle Theater for the final show last Saturday night saw, heard and participated in a broadcast nobody knew was coming off—or going on, or whatever it is a broadcast does—until the thing was under way. The business that took the air was the Spotlight Band program which, every Saturday night, brings to the mike the musical outfit whose records have sold the most during the previous week. Sammy Kaye, now occupying the Earle stage with his Swing and Sway Orchestra, won it for the second week in succession with his recording of his own patriotic song, "Remember Pearl Harbor.' The crowd got as big a bang out of it as Sammy.

A good thing I bothered that high-strung, Southern gentleman, Sam Galanty, with a lot of questions about this evening's junket to Fort Belvoir to dine with Joe E. Brown and then watch his "Happy-Go-Lucky" USO-Camp Shows production, costarring Linda Darnell. It came out also that Mr. Galanty and his bride are leaving Washington Saturday for a belated three-week honeymoon in Florida. Never having been in Florida before, the charming Mrs. Galanty could not have picked a better guide. Sam ain't been nowhere else but—much—these latter years. Oh, yes, we leave for Fort Belvoir from the Willard at 5. Kill two ducks with one dornick is what I always say.

Barrymore Tires Of Great Profile

John Barrymore was about to step before the camera for a close-up in "Playmates," which stars Kay Kyser.

"How do you want it?" he asked Producer-Director David Butler. "Front view, slightly thyroid or three-quarter, paternally benign."

"This will be a profile shot." Butler replied. "What do you call that, John?"

"That," replied the Great Profile, "is the predatory, or breadwinner trademark. And sometimes I grow a little weary of it."

Morelli Makes Capital Debut As 'Rigoletto'

By Ray C. B. Brown

"RIGOLETTO." Fortune Gallo presents the San Carlo Opera Company in a performance of Verdi's opera. Conducted by Carlo Peroni, at the National Theater.

THE CAST:
Rigoletto .....Carlo Morelli
Gilda .....Lucille Meusel
Duke of Mantua .....Eugene Conley
Monterone .....Richard Wentworth
Sparafucile .....Harold Kravitt
Maddelena .....Charlotte Bruno

Last evening's performance of "Rigoletto" by the San Carlo Company in the National Theater introduced two singers new to Washington in the persons of Carlo Morelli, guest baritone in the title role, and Eugene Conley in the tenor lead as the Duke of Mantua. These two, together with Lucille Meusel as Gilda, lightened the responsibility of Carlo Peroni at the conductor's desk, so well versed were they in their parts and so responsive to direction. The fine cooperative spirit of the company was again manifest in the smoothness of the action and the crispness of the choral passages.

Carlo Morelli showed histrionic ability to a skilled degree in his impersonation of the deformed court buffoon, a part which demands quick changes of mood—from the foolish wit of ribaldry to the consuming anxiety of a father trying to hide a fair daughter from the sight of a conscienceless libertine, from despairing sorrow over Gilda's betrayal to devastating rage in the swearing of vengeance. His voice is a little light for the exigent role, but he used it very effectively, and made all his climactic points with surety.

Eugene Conley, one of Fortune Gallo's recent discoveries among American singers, is a find, indeed. He has a clear and vibrant voice, well placed and confident, flexible and capable of both tenderness and plangent sonority. He is thoroughly schooled in phrasing and breath control, and he did not miss a trick in the Verdi technique of vocal writing. From the moment that he had finished the ballata, "Questa o quella," in the first act, it was evident that he was to be relied upon for the subsequent arias.

Early Critics Reversed

Despite one's appreciation of Lucille Meusel's gracile and charming Gilda and the refinement of her phrasing, one was a bit disappointed in her singing, which was not quite up to her standard. Either she was suffering from a cold or she has been experimenting with its placement. There were moments when her tone was veiled and her attack the veriest trifle uncertain, and again she would be her old self with the translucent tone and the precise centering on the note. One noticed also several times a strain in her usually firm high tones, a tautening of the vocal chords unusual in her assured artistry.

"Rigoletto" is now so inalienably established in public affection that its early history seems strange. With a plot based on Victor Hugo's "Le Roi s'amuse," it had from the beginning to evade official censorship as an attack upon the divine right of kings. It dodged about under various titles—"Lionello" in Naples and "Viscardello" in Rome, where it was furiously hissed in 1851. Then it had to overcome the opposition of the old-line critics who adored Rossini and considered Verdi a vulgarian.

Typical of this attitude were the animadversions of the English critic, Henry Chorley. The part of Gilda he declared to be cold, childish, puerile. "The air sung by her when she retires in sleep on the evening of her abduction is but a lackadaisical yawn. Even in the quartet of the last act her share amounts to little more than a chain of disconnected sobs—tragedy as physical in its way as the cough of the Camellia lady. These devices belong to low art."

Departmental Memos

New York, Feb. 2.

GIFT DEPARTMENT: Clifford Odets received a package from Dunhill's containing two elegant pipes. In the package was a note, in feminine handwriting: "In appreciation for what you have done for—H. M. G." . . . The playwright was mystified. He couldn't associate those initials with the names of any girls he's known—nor, for that matter, with any of his male friends. He then concluded that the package was sent to him by mistake—but there was his name and address, clearly inscribed. Finally, Odets phoned Dunhill's—and solved the mystery. Some weeks earlier he had worked on a documentary short for Britain and refused the check offered for his services. "H. M. G." meant His Majesty's Government.

OSCAR LEVANT

FASHIONS DEPARTMENT: Alice Leone Moats, the magazine writer, just returned from Russia. She was in Moscow when the Nazi artillery began to shell that city and the Stukas dropped their bombs near Lenin's tomb . . . At the height of the bombardment, Miss Moats received a cable from the editor of Vogue asking for "an article on Soviet fashions, and the social life in Moscow."

WAR DEPARTMENT: Last week the Legion for American Unity inaugurated its campaign to collect the medals presented to American citizens by the Axis governments, to melt them and convert them into bullets. Mayor LaGuardia was photographed, in a pose which showed him holding these collected medals . . . Fiorello has a couple of medals presented to him by the Italian government during the last war for bravery in action. He hasn't surrendered these medals. "The Italian government which gave them to me is different from the government in Rome today," is his logical reason. "The medals were presented by a government allied with America, fighting on the side of Democracy—before Fascism was born."

THEATER DEPARTMENT: In "Cafe Crown," the comedy based upon the Cafe Royal of Second Avenue, Sam Jaffe plays the delightful role of "Hymie," the headwaiter-owner . . . yesterday the original Hymie telephoned from his Cafe Royal. He told the show's publicist that the man who supervises his business deals wanted to see the play. "He's my banker, and he wants three tickets for Friday night" . . . "In whose name shall we leave the tickets?" the publicist asked . . . "In my name, 'Hymie,'" was the reply . . . And so, vice president of the Chase National Bank will step up to the box office of the Cort Theater and ask for three tickets in the name of "Hymie."

PERSONAL: Last week Oscar Levant was asked to confirm the published rumor that his wife is having a baby. He refused to issue any statement. When his questioner persisted, Levant finally stated: "The only thing I can tell you about that is—it's now 2 a. m., and my wife just phoned me to bring home for her a pear and a pickle."

POETRY DEPARTMENT: Ben Hecht, who is leaving for Hollywood, has written this sonnet to the cast of his "Lily of the Valley":

Shine on, my little actor pearls, despite
The critic swine have sniffed and walked away.
My heart is your small hall of fame and bright
There glows the luster that you gave my play.
Good, boisterous Sig and Myron, stormy lad.
Clement and Pevney, brilliant Willie Lee
Dear Johnny Fliliber, I wish I had
More crowns to offer than this minstrelsy.
Sweet Minnie and bright little Katy Bard,
O'Malley, Taber, Hoffman, Skippy,—all
Who made the Lily live—I know how hard
It is to fight so well and yet to fall.
Here's my press notice for your books—the part
You played will run forever in my heart.

MOVIES: Garson Kanin and Robert Russell have written a movie about the Navy, for OEM. They brought the screenplay to Robert Horton, the Director of Information. While he was reading it, Kanin and Russell busied themselves by studying the detailed map, full of pins of many colors, which covers a wall of Horton's office . . . They tried to trace the warfare in the Pacific, argued about possible military and naval maneuvers, and checked through the reference books nearby, to support their contentions . . . Horton finished reading the script, and broke his silence: "The President, Gen. MacArthur and Admiral Hart couldn't write a script half as good as this one. So boys—get away from that map."

Some of It Was Blue!

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 2.—When Cecil De Mille loaned his name as an organizer of a station for receiving blood donations, he asked what it was like to give one, and was told strain was no more than getting a haircut. That didn't satisfy C. B. He's over age, but went down and gave a pint of his blood. And while there, ran into Donald Crisp doing the same thing. Now C. B.'s got a fine idea for a screen story. The statio... which Carlton Alsop manages was donated by the carpenters, painters, etc., who gave their services and some of the materials that went into it. Carlton says it breaks your heart to see women who have boys at the front come in, with babies in their arms, begging to give their blood. And finally the U. S. C. and U. C. L. A. football teams got together to give theirs, too.

CECIL B. DE MILLE

There's nothing like putting forth the right thoughts. When I wrote the other day about studios doing a follow-up of "The Fighting 69th" and calling it "The Sons of the Fighting 69th," I had no idea 'twould be done. By golly, Warners are doing it. Charles Grayson is working on the script, and it's dollars to doughnuts they'll have one or two of the original cast in the follow-up.

Ran into Ann Harding the other day. She looks so beautiful. I think Hollywood should babe its head examined for not giving her parts on the screen, she's such a fine actress. Incidentally, her husband's, Werner Janssen's, concerts are going over like a house afire.

If our excitable actor-director, Greg Ratoff, just stood on a street corner and shouted, "Isn't it SENSATIONAL!" it would make the day seem brighter for passersby. The emphasis he gets into that word gives you a lift.

Mrs. Bob Hope and Ann Warner worked like beavers putting over the Mayfair Party at the Mocambo for Ann Lehr's Hollywood Guild. Place was packed, and guests wore themselves out dancing to Phil Ohman's music. "Twinkletoes" Bob Hope was in rare form; Paulette Goddard very agreeable to our flyers present. K. T. Stevens and Alfred Vanderbilt are really that way about each other, and a cute couple. Cobina Wright there with her new husband; Norma Shearer looking 18 in a new haircut and black gown; Margaret Lindsay and Burgess Meredith found much to talk about. Bill Lundigan there with that cute Thomson girl, and the Leigh Battsons, Carlton Burkes and Irene Dunne got together.

Did you know that Irene Manning, who's playing opposite Humphrey Bogart, is former concert singer Hope Manning? Guess when she entered pictures she gave up Hope . . . Ouch!

Philippa Edel, Eastern sculptress, is out here making a bust of Jean Gabin . . . Richard Denning, Dorothy Lamour's leading man in "Beyond the Blue Horizon," went over a ski jump on a sled at Wrightwood, is back home now with a limp—and content to stick to jungle pictures.

This Morning

—Without Shirley Povich

By Jack Munhall

MUNHALL

What a sucker this Povich is to let me write his column while he's down there in Florida allegedly taking a vacation. Don't know why sports columnists need a seasonal vacation anyway, they're on a perpetual one. Wish all I had to worry about in life was dashing off one of these pieces each day and covering the Nats a couple of months each year. And imagine getting a couple of months in the Florida sunshine to boot. But, I'd better get started and rattle this thing off . . . Now what was that swell idea I had a couple days ago? Gosh! can't seem to remember it. Aw, but what's the difference, a columnist can write about anything. Won't be any trouble to find another piece that'll knock 'em dead.

I could comment on Leo Durocher's signing a new one-year contract to manage the Brooklyn Dodgers. That's probably what Povich would have done. Can picture what Povich would have written, something like "The Dodgers ought to be a cinch to sail to another National League pennant now that they're assured of their big wind again. . . " Rich, eh? But I can't write about Durocher. Wouldn't have enough to say. Just dawned on me that all I know about the fellow is what I've read.

Ah, here's an idea! Les MacMitchell, the former schoolboy wonder, is going to run up in New York in the Millrose Games Saturday night. He's trying for the first four-minute mile. Nice kid, that MacMitchell and a real plugger. Hope he makes it. Wouldn't be surprised if he did, too. Gee! this is a natural! Hardest trainer on the track. What an inspiration it'd be to the kids of the country during this emergency to work hard and keep in shape if MacMitchell should do that four-minute mile. Why it'll make 'em . . . MacMitchell, the typical looking American youngster who takes his track so seriously . . . trains year around, doing cross country all through the winter . . . Greatest all-around runner I've ever seen in college . . . Never forget him up there in the Penn Relays last year . . . but all that's been written. Funny, can't seem to think of a single thing to say about him that people don't know.

No Reason for Panning Wade

But, that's all right. I've still got plenty of possible subjects. Just a case of choosing the right one so these Povich readers will see what a fellow like me can do when he gets the chance. How about what Wallace Wade said about the colleges using freshmen in football? That he doesn't want to, even if he does have a good team. Sounds kind of stuffy, doesn't it? Ought'n pan that fellow like they did out there on the coast a couple of years ago. Won't play freshmen, won't he? No matter what happens. In times like these he should be ashamed of himself . . . but hold on! farther down in the story it says that if the other colleges do use freshmen, Wade will, too. Well that's more like it. And look, he gives his reasons for being against it. Says the average freshman needs a year of experience before playing varsity ball so he won't be so apt to get hurt. Hmm. That's logical enough. And say, he's got a good point there. Seems true, that with the colleges trying to rush the boys through their courses in the interests of national defense, freshmen'll have enough to do getting acclimated without having to play football, too. Guess Wade isn't so bad, after all. Won't pan him this time, but he'd better be careful.

Wheew! it would have been awful to have sounded off about anyone as well known as Wade without having the facts right. Probably would have had a lot of Duke alumni on my ear. Lot of 'em in this town, too. Even the North Carolina alumni, who would have called in to take my side wouldn't have saved my hide. But enough of this fooling. Here it is ten minutes since I started this piece. Expected to be through and out of here by this time, and instead I haven't a thing written. Is my face red? Not discouraged, though. Naw, not at all. Why, you know I've heard that it takes Povich simply hours to write all of his columns and that his wife sometimes has to lock him in his room and . . .

Ching Johnson—Always Helpful

Oh, but that's no business of mine and anyhow I've simply got to get going here. Well, thank heavens there's one thing I can write about for sure, Ice hockey. Know all about that. And saw my first match just three years ago. How about all the beefs Eddie Shore was making the other night when the Lions bumped off his great Springfield Indians, 1-0? Ha, ha, ha! . . . Don't care much for that Shore fellow's attitude . . . Supposing he was a great player in his day. Shucks, he wasn't no better than our "Ching" Johnson. Now there's a swell guy for you. Always helpful and always telling me everything I want to know and never even smiling when I ask him silly questions about hockey. You know, it just dawned on me. Maybe that's why I think I know so much about hockey. 'Cause Johnson's all the time telling me things. Hmm!

Golly day! Lok at that time. Won't even have time to do this column. And after waiting so long to show that Povich up, too. Oh, well I can do it next year when he takes another vacation. What an easy life those sport columnists have.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, Feb. 2.—At the New York baseball writers dinner: Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis (eternally doughty in his dinner jacket, at 75 years of age)—all this started 19 years ago, when a few of the boys invited me to come to New York and I said I would if they threw me a party . . . you and I have an engagement for the next 10 years.

CONSIDINE

SID MERCER (my favorite sports writer, and veteran toastmaster of the annual dinner)—thanks for that assurance.

WILLIAM LYON PHELPS (who calls his 1 year of teaching at Harvard and his 41 years of teaching at Yale "equitable")—we gave up football at Yale 2 years ago . . . sports pages are a blessing to newspaper readers. The front pages, even in peacetimes, bear only messages of sadness: Divorces, murder, thefts, even the reports of my speeches. But the sports pages, ah, they contain an inspiriting record of victory . . . bowling is the only tiresome sport . . . will the umpires in the audience stand up? (Bill Klem and Bill McGowan did, and the applause was riotous). That's the first time (said Phelps) that I ever heard an umpire cheered. Yet we all tend to overlook one thing: Charges have been lodged, with justice, against ball players, indeed, some of our better judges are behind bars, and representations have been made against professors and against minions of every other calling. But never against an umpire.

MAYOR FIORELLA LAGUARDIA (introduced as a man who is leading a double life).—I hope I live long enough to hear someone, even a professor, say a kind word for mayors . . . you can forget the dinner that is supposed to lie in large sports assemblies. In New York, at least, baseball business will be conducted as usual. Arrangements will be made at our three ball parks to provide proper exits for even the largest crowds, if, by some chance, an alarm should be sounded or our city is attacked.

JACK KELLY (the Olympic oarsman who heads the sports department of United States Civilian Defense).—The Japanese swimmers in the 1924 Olympics were a ridiculous lot. Yet I could see they were trying. In the 1932 games they won most of the important places. Then, we all read, how they swam with full packs for a mile or so in the assault on Hongkong. How many of our troops could do that? I think sports programs should be enlarged, instead of cut down for the duration. We've got to keep fit, for it's a civilian war as much as it's a soldier's war. You remember the old English woman who was dug out of the ruins of her home, after a severe bombing, and when the air raid wardens asked, "Is the old man still under the debris?" she replied, "No. He's in the army—the bloody coward."

SERGT. HANK GREENBERG (who had to leave early, after receiving his plaque, in order to catch a train for Camp Custer).—I'm back in uniform for the duration. I'm glad of this opportunity to say farewell.

We don't think enough credit has been given to Cookie Lavagetto for his enlistment in naval aviation. After all, most of the athletes who have gotten wild applause of late for their patriotism, were drafted into the services. Lavagetto, several times chosen as the best third baseman in the National League, and with five or six prosperous years of baseball before him, was in Class 3-A and might have remained there even if we were invaded as deep as Akron.

He enlisted the moment his brother, whom he had been supporting (along with a number of others) got a defense job. He felt morally called upon to give to the Government his ability to fly a plane. Anyway, my lid's off to a good, game guy, who, with a minimum of fanfare and under no compulsion, is doing his bit.

New York hasn't seen the last of that West Texas State Basketball Team, which was beaten by Long Island University in the last three seconds of an extra period last week. The club looked so good against St. Joseph's in Philadelphia Saturday night that Ned Irish, the Garden's basketball promoter, will bring the towering Texans back to the big city for the annual intercollegiate court tournament at the shag end of the season.

And if the Texans can overcome a slight case of big city jitters, they should win it.

Lee Savold T. K. O.'s Mismatched Beech

1000 Fans Boo, Some Walk Out

Beech Knocked Down Four Times Before Bout Is Stopped At 1:57 of Fourth

By Tony Neri

A farce was staged last night at Turner's Arena when Heavyweights Lee Savold, of Des Moines, and Neville Beech, of Memphis, were scheduled to go ten rounds in the main event of Promoter Joe Turner's boxing show.

Beech, a pitiful figure of a fighter, was slapped to the canvas four times before Referee Charlie Reynolds stopped the sad affair at 1:57 of the fourth round and awarded the fight to Savold on a technical knockout.

Savold, not even working up a sweat, cuffed the young Southerner about the ring at will. Beech has yet to land the first solid punch.

Fans Walk Out

A crowd of 1000 paid $1237 at the gate, and before the fight had progressed to the third round, many fans were seen leaving the small arena. It was a disappointing show. Beech looked the part of a neophyte and fought the same way.

In that fourth round a pair of left hooks sent Beech toppling to the floor, where he took a count of nine. The two blows, followed by a right sfash, spelled the end amid a round of boos.

Paradoxically, Beech won the opening round on The Post score card. But he wasn't any ball of fire, however. Neither was Savold. The fight hadn't gone beyond the second round before the fans were yelling for action.

Savold, handcuffed by a fighter who was hanging on, tried to get a workout, but the affair was such a farce that it made the Des Moines veteran look bad. Beech was floored twice in the third round and twice in the fourth.

The weights were: Savold, 195; Beech, 186.

Savold's manager announced after the fight that he was due for a conference with Promoter Mike Jacobs this morning in New York and that Savold has a good chance to meet Champion Joe Louis in Washington some time in May.

Daly was closeted with Jacobs twice last week when a championship fight was discussed. Daly said he believed Melio Bettina would get the march shot at Louis and that a Savold fight is virtually assured.

Good Prelims

The preliminaries last night were outstanding and kept the show from being too much of a lemon.

In a whirlwind eight-round semi-windup fight, Carl (Red) Guggino outslugged game little Oscar Wright, local colored lightweight, to gain an unanimous decision. The ringwise Gagginno rained a shower of punches on the lighter Wright from the opening bell.

Floored in the opening round, the colored boy was at a disadvantage throughout. Guggino's left hooks and roundhouse rights found their mark in a steady stream to little Wright's jaw.

Wright raised a mouse over Guggino's eye in the last round with a potent right, but outside of that Guggino had things his own way. The winner weighed 140 and Wright scaled 136.

In one of the shortest fights on record here, Jabbo Kenner, giant heavyweight, knocked out Freddy Griggs, a stablemate of Beech, in 40 seconds of the opening round of a scheduled eight. Kenner crashed a powerful right on the side of Griggs' jaw and the Texan crumpled to the floor to be counted out. Kenner weighed 218 and Griggs 200.

Kid Stribling, 157, gained the nod over Powerhouse Johnson, 164, in the first four-rounder on the card. Both are from Washington.

Sammy Daniels outpointed Roscoe Perry in another four. Both are local boys and each tipped the scales at 129.

Beech Going Down Second of His 4 Times

The bell saved Neville Beech at the end of the second round last night as he hit the ropes while falling to the floor. He went down twice more before Lee Savold was awarded a technical knockout in the fourth round at Turner's

Indiana Stops Ohio State Five, 46-43

By the Associated Press

Columbus, Ohio, February 2.—A well-balanced quintet of Indiana sharpshooters trimmed Ohio State, 48 to 43, in a thrill-packed Western Conference basketball game here tonight before a crowd of 3355 persons.

The Hoosiers grabbed the lead with two quick baskets from midfloor and it was 10 minutes before Ohio State forged ahead, largely through the ability of Center Bob Shaw to dribble in for under-basket shots.

Hawkeyes Win By Record, 64-30

Iowa City, Iowa, Feb. 2 (AP).—Iowa's Hawkeyes broke their own scoring record in the Big Ten tonight by swamping the hapless Chicago basketball team, 64 to 40.

Highest previous score amassed by an Iowa team in conference competition was the 62-to-47 conquest of Illinois in 1940.

Ben Trickey wrote a new individual scoring record for a Hawkeye cageman with his 27 points, 24 of them on goals. The old record was 23 points.

Chicago, loser of 25 consecutive Big Ten games since 1940, played the Hawkeyes even during the first half and Iowa held only a 23-to-22 margin at the intermission.

Maryland's Travis Keeps Mates in Game With 19 Points; Keydets Grab Early Lead

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Va., Feb. 2.—V. M. I.'s basketball team showed revived form here tonight to defeat the University of Maryland, 46 to 41.

Travis, of Maryland, took scoring honors for the game with 19 points. Guards Emil Sotnyk and Ross Walker, of V. M. I., followed with 12 points each.

The game was fast the entire time. V. M. I. took the lead early in the contest and dropped it only twice for very short periods.

The Keydets took a good advantage near the close of the first half on three field goals by Walker and another one by Sotnyk, and led, 27-21.

Vince Thomas, of Norfolk, V. M. I. forward, paced the Keydets through several tough spots.

USLTA Plans Night Tennis, Benefit Meets

By the United Press

New York, Feb. 2.—President Holcombe Ward of the U. S. Lawn Tennis Association disclosed today that his organization is mapping plans for two major patriotic objectives to be accomplished this year:

1. The provision of night tennis for thousands of day workers throughout the country, as an aid to John B. Kelly's national campaign for physical fitness, and

2. The staging of three Nation-wide tourneys among the association's 850 clubs on Decoration Day, Fourth of July and Labor Day to help the Red Cross and United Service Organizations.

Jeffra Decisions Speary in Toronto

Toronto, Feb. 2 (AP).—Harry Jeffra, of Baltimore, tonight won a 10-round decision from Billy Speary, of Nanticoke, Pa., in a boxing bout before more than 7000 fans. Jeffra weighed 126½, Speary 127½.

Columbus U. Wins, 48-45, Over La Salle

Hancock's 21 Points Lead Explorers; Philadelphia Five Ahead at Half-Time

Columbus University's all-local courtmen won their best triumph in eight thus far this season last night when Soup Hancock pot-shotted his mates to the 48-to-45 victory over LaSalle, of Philadelphia, in Tech gymnasium.

The former Eastern all-high redhead flipped in nine field goals, a great majority from midcourt which ripped the cords without touching the rim, and added three foul shots for 21 points.

The visitors had won 8 out of 12 games up to last night and were apparently surprised to be trailing, 14 to 10, at the end of the first period. Coach Charley O'Brien, a former Temple University captain, substituted a taller team at the end of the period and LaSalle went ahead, 27 to 25, at halftime.

The Philadelphians hit a hot streak at the start of the second half and went ahead, 33-27, but only momentarily, for the Columbus squad, led by Hancock, spurted and scored 15 consecutive points to go ahead, 42-33. Here LaSalle took complete charge and, with Charles McGlone tapping in three field goals, scored ten straight points and took the lead, 43-42.

Joe Mohr may have meant the difference between victory and defeat for the visitors, for, with his team trailing, 47-45, and more than a minute to play, he went in but failed to report and Hancock converted the technical foul called by Referee Phil Fox.

Acky Viana, one of the District's leading scorers, boosted his average with 13 points and Gerry Burns maintained his with 11. Berry and Hancock did not add greatly to the scoring but played fine ball-hawk roles.

Coach O'Brien and the entire LaSalle squad bickered constantly with Fox and Official Orrel Mitchell and carried their complaints long and loud into the dressing room, but Columbus had the ball game. It was one of the roughest and fastest tilts of the season and found the local Explorers at their best.

'Biff' Jones Resumes Duty At West Point

By the Associated Press

West Point, N. Y., Feb. 2.—Biff Jones, once more Maj. Lawrence McC. Jones, returned to his alma mater today as graduate manager of athletics after an absence that was just thtree days less than ten years.

It was a decade ago this week that the then Capt. Jones left the Point to take over the football chores at Louisiana State University. He followed that with a tour of duty at Oklahoma University and five years ago became football coach and director of athletics at the University of Nebraska.

Still attired in a business suit, Jones said he expected to break out in a "uniform of some sort in a few days." He resigned from the Army to take the Husker post and was recalled last month.

His arrival kept alive a legend that "there'll always be a Jones at West Point."

He and his brother, Col. Herbert M. Jones, were graduated by the Military Academy at about the same time and since 1913, when Biff entered as a cadet, one of the two has been on duty at the Point at all times except for several months a few years ago.

Col. Jones left the academy last month for another station after serving a tour here as assistant adjutant general.

Next July 1, another generation of the Joneses starts with Biff's 17-year-old son, Lawrence, jr., entering as a plebe. Right now he's at the Taft School in Connecticut. A 6-footer weighing 185 pounds, the youngster isn't "a bad footballer," admitted Papa Biff.

Jones, a bruising tackle in his cadet days, was the Army's head coach from 1926 through 1929 and returned in 1931 for a brief period as assistant graduate manager.

In his present post he will not coach football but will prepare the schedules for the 18 different intercollegiate sports in which the Army competes and represent the school at conferences.

Feeney Reelected At Indian Spring

John F. Feeney was reelected president of Indian Spring Club last night at the annual election meeting at the Four Corners Clubhouse.

The eight members elected to the board of governors were Joseph E. Hayes, A. S. Kay, owner; Frank E. Mirth, Harry Abrams, Phil Berman, Dr. L. M. Cubillier, John Edward Fitzgerald and M. C. Gordon.

Tunero Beats Brown

Baltimore, Feb. 2 (AP).—Kid Tunero, Cuban middleweight, won a unanimous decision over Mose Brown, Pittsburgh Negro, tonight in a 10-round bout. Tunero jabbed persistently to build up a strong lead and then in the last three rounds punched it out with Brown. Tunero weighed 161, Brown 170.

Double Meeting Of Stellar Nines Set July 6 and 7; Night Issue Snagged

By Bob Considine

New York, Feb. 2.—As the first step in raising $500,000 to provide bats, balls and other baseball equipment for our armed services, the major leagues today decided to play two All-Star games this coming season. The moguls also took steps to increase sales of defense bonds and stamps.

The first All-Star game will be played July 6, probably at the Polo Grounds in New York. The second will be played either the following day or night at either Cleveland Municipal Stadium or Comiskey Field in Chicago, with the same teams competing.

The entire receipts of the first game will be turned over to the ball and bat fund, which sprung into existence at the winter meeting of the club owners when they and Judge Landis' office appropriated $24,000 for this work. The Baseball Writers' Association contributed another thousand dollars from its treasury.

Many Thousands Needed

"But $25,000 would provide only one baseball and half a bat for each group of 750 men in uniform," Ford Frick, president of the National League, said at a press conference which interrupted the day-long "war council." He added:

"We need much more money for this fund, and that's way we've added another All-Star game. All of the equipment purchased will be used in the continental United States—inasmuch as the Army now provides a full sports kit for every 250 men sent abroad."

At the fiery insistence of Larry MacPhail, the Brooklyn Dodger president, who almost kidnaped the Kaiser at the close of World War I, it was agreed that baseball men from Judge Landis down to the Phillies' bat boy would be requested to accept 10 per cent of their salaries in defense bonds. A majority of the men who make a living from the pastime is expected to fall in line with the MacPhail plan, but it will not be a hard-and-fast rule.

Another MacPhail Defense Plan

MacPhail also worked out a plan whereby $1 more will be added to the standard prices of the second All-Star game. Ticket holders will be given a stub which can be cashed in at any bank in the city where the game is held—and the stub-holder will be given a dollar's worth of defense stamps. All other money collected at the second game will go into the ball and bat fund.

Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Nats and long-time foe of the National League, invaded the guarded conference room of the senior league's owners late to-

Clark Mare Stages Drive To Win Out

Favored Get Off Runs Third; Place Taken by Off Shore Before 10,000 Fans

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 2.—The running of the Ground Hog Purse left most of the 10,049 fans stunned here today. Get Off, which recently won the Palm Beach Handicap for the Edward S. Moores and ranked as one of the dangerous candidates for the rich Widener Handicap, finished third, while Pretty Pet, flying the silks of Hialeah's President John C. Clark, emerged from a long losing streak to win at odds of $31.20 for $2.

A half dozen horses started in the 1-mile event, with Get Off closing at odds of 1 to 2. He and Century Note, which never could better fourth position, were the only Widener eligibles in the field. Pretty Pet got up in the last stride to nose out J. H. Miles' Off Shore, while Get Off followed, three lengths behind, under topweight of 118 pounds. The time was not fast, the winner requiring 1:39 to complete her trip under a mere 101 pounds.

This race offered Basil James a grand opportunity to pass Conn McCreary in the local jockey standing, both having a dozen winners. James was on Get Off, McCreary, back in action after a week of enforced idleness, rode Century Note.

A messy start saw Dog House and Pretty Pet away very slowly. Doubt Not, a fast sprinter, stole an eight-length lead in the first furlongs, with Off Shore and Get Off following, well apart. James hit Get Off with the whip rounding out of the backstretch and again after turning for home. His mount made up ground too slowly to become a threat. Off Shore drew up with the fatigued Doubt Not a furlong from home, but it remained for the elderly mare, Pretty Pet, to hit the line first after a great rally on the outside.

Auction Time at Idle Santa Anita

There's still activity at Santa Anita race track, though not the usual kind. Banned as a result of the war, racing gave over to midwinter auctions of the California Breeders' Association last week. This is a view as yearlings, horses in training and brood mares went under the hammer of Auctioneer C. F. Adams (right)

Columbus U. Faces Miami Boxers Here

One of its two home stands of the season will be made by Columbus University's ring team tonight when it tangles with Miami University's formidable forces at Turner's Arena at 8:30.

Their chances damaged by forfeits in a 4-4 deadlock with Indiana State (Pa.) Teachers and a 4½-3½ loss to Lock Haven in previous matches, the Explorers again fear the necessity of forfeiting in at least one match to the Miami team which tripped Catholic University by 5-3 last weekend.

Doubtful starters for the Explorers are Lou Taub, 127, whose Army papers arrived last week; Sam Tytelman and Al McAleer, 135-pounder and heavyweight, both of whom suffered rib injuries during last week's battle with Indiana State.

If Taub's induction can be put off until after tonight, and if Tytelman and McAleer are sufficiently well, the Explorers may toss a complete team at the Hurricane, otherwise forfeits will be necessary. In any case, Columbus will be an underdog against one of the finest group of fighters in Miami history.

Other local entries will be Jack Golumb, 120; Bernie Jackson, welterweight; Charley Cox, 165, and Romeo Garzo, light-heavyweights.

Jacobsen Wins Heurich Feature

Jacobsen Florists, leaders in the second half of Heurich Amateur Basketball League play, were given one of their toughest battles of the season last night before downing the D. C. Silents, 46-41, at Heurich Gym.

Though out front by 34-18 at the half, Jacobsen faltered in the last two quarters and barely hung on to win. Bob Custer's 14 points for the winners proved one better than the totals of Burris and Jones, who paced the losers.

In other games Senate romped over B. and B. Farms easily, 54-35, and FBI smashed Michelbach by a 56-38 count.

Two Chicago Tracks Schedule 39 Stakes

Chicago, Feb. 2 (INS).—Two of Chicago's horse racing plants, Washington and Arlington Park, tonight announced 1942 programs including 39 stakes with an added value of $346,500. The total value of the two programs will be $1,300,000.

The Arlington classic and the American Derby, both for 3-year-olds and each endowed with $50,000, top the list of stake races. The classic will be run July 25 and the Derby on August 29.

The $25,000 added Arlington Handicap, and the $25,000 Washington Handicap will be among other big stake races on the programs.

Selections at Hialeah Park

Dear Al:

If you don't think the Circle M Ranch, with 17 horses here, is a swanky outfit, it furnishes paper matches with the Circle M colors and emblem to its help. A big booing knows no locality. Sounds as bad here as at Cumberland. The stewards got the raspberry when they took out the number of Hasty Wire last Saturday. They placed him in third position, however. That was the first time this rule has been used. The stewards, after disqualifying a horse, can place him anywhere from second to last. In this case, Hasty Wire bothered the horses that finished second and taird to him and thus his being given third place was a fair decision. Might be a good idea to have this rule in Maryland. Jockey N. L. Person has been suspended for 15 days for rough riding. Last Friday's "War Benefit Day" here produced $32,018.17 to be divided four ways by the Paralysis Fund, Red Cross, Navy Relief and Army Relief. The New York turf writers have given out the result of a poll taken to determine persons who contributed the most to racing during 1941. Those honored are Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, as the sportsman who did the most for racing; Warren Wright, as the breeder who made the greatest contribution to the turf (Whirlaway); Alfred Robertson, as outstanding rider of 1941; George Washington Carroll, as most skillful trainer, irrespective of number of winners saddled. By Conscript goes today. He'll take all the money. Don't forget where you got it. Hal Price Headley, Kentucky sportsman, told the other day how his grand race horse and rising young sire, Menow, was named. Whenever Headley came home, it was the custom of his children to greet him with a welcoming embrace and kiss. The older ones usually were first to reach him, and generally the last one was his youngest daughter, Patricia. She would stretch forth her chubby arms, look up at her father and greet him with the cry, "Me Now." See you on the rail. BILL.

FIRST RACE—MENEITHER has been showing improvement and appears ready to turn back this field. LONG RANGE has worked well and belongs close. BOLO ELLA for the minor award.

SECOND RACE—KEEKEE likes this track and I'm going to string along. DAY BY DAY is primed for this sort of sprint and appears second best. BEZIQUE for the third position.

THIRD RACE—BEAT 'EM is a good one and seems ideally placed in this field. I see no reason for mistakes. BROTHER DEAR'S last was encouraging. OFF KEY to take care of the others.

FOURTH RACE — KASIDAH meets fillies and mares in this event and she promises to make the most of the No. 1 post position. REHEARSAL stopped after setting the pace last out. May go on today. AERIAL BOMB for the show end.

FIFTH RACE—BY CONSCRIPT, one I passed along early, needs only a ride in this. WOOD ROBIN, recent winner, is a threat. ALOHORT to take care of the others.

SIXTH RACE—TRANSIENT gets in this with a feather assignment and should take it all. BUTTON HOLE and BELLE POISE for the place and show positions.

SEVENTH RACE—BONNIE GOLOS, a winner at the meeting, should pick up another purse in this field. HERE NOW is a possible surprise. ANONYMOUS belongs in the cash circle.

EIGHTH RACE—IDA ROGERS has been rested for this and I see no reason for mistakes. DEAR YANKEE and FANCY FREE to account for the remainder of the purse money.

Best bet—BY CONSCRIPT.

Alsab Meets the Best At Hialeah Saturday

$5000 Bahamas Handicap Pits Champ Against Requested, Eternal Bull

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Feb. 2.—Good-natured Alsab, last year's 2-year-old champion, will make his 1942 debut Saturday, running in fast company in a $5000 stake at Hialeah Park.

The Bahamas Handicap, first major test for 3-year-olds, attracted a field which would grace any race to be run this year, even the Kentucky Derby.

With no preliminary airing, Alsab will be called upon to travel not only against Requested, second-best 2-year-old in the 1941 class, but also against Eternal Bull, his conqueror in the Myles Standish Stakes last fall.

Delighted with Alsab's performance in a workout today—a mile in 1:38 2-5—Owner Al Sabath said the placid thoroughbred is a certain starter Saturday unless he is assigned too heavy a load.

"If the weights are fair and equitable," Sabath declared, "we'll run him.

"He is ready to go. I see no reason why he can't carry on with his winning record. His workout today was sensational. He wasn't blowing hard enough to put out a match when he came back. He had about 125 pounds on his back, too."

B. F. Whitaker's Requested is expected to draw a load second only to Alsab when weights are announced by Handicapper Charles L. McLennan late Wednesday.

Other highly regarded entries in the Bahamas—a 6-furlong preliminary to the $25,000 Flamingo Stakes—include Bright Willie, winner of the Hialeah Stakes; Figgeritout, a double winner at the meeting here; Sweep Swinger, the Bowie Endurance Handicap winner and Incoming, winner of Pimlico's Sagamore Handicap.

Not to be lightly passed by are such able performers as Automaton, Tomochichi, First Fiddle, American Wolf, Bold Question and Eternal Peace.

Team Champions Listed on Turner's Wrestling Card

Undefeated locally, the two-man wrestling team champions, Ace Freeman and Maurice LaChapelle, will return to Turner's Arena Thursday night for a special match on the card to be featured by Cowboy Luttrell, of Houston, and Gino Garibaldi, the Italian ace.

Freeman and LaChappelle, who last week chalked up their eighth straight Arena victory by conquering Herbie Freeman and Stanley Pinto, will oppose the same Freeman plus his new partner, cagey Jim Austeri. Freeman complained that Pinto did not team with him quite properly, and thus grabbed Austeri, seasoned two-man campaigner.

In the semiwindup Emil Dusek, who won from Pat Fraley when the latter suffered a dislocated finger last week, will meet Leo Numa, former University of Washington athlete.

McCarthy Sent To Indianapolis

New York, Feb. 2 (AP).—Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis ruled today that First Baseman Johnny McCarthy, whom the New York Giants had sold to Columbus of the American Association, must instead be sent to Indianapolis in compliance with a verbal agreement Bill Terry of the Giants had made with Leo Hartnett of Indianapolis in Chicago, December 9.

The Giants had assigned McCarthy's contract to Columbus, a farm of the St. Louis Cardinals, after completing their deal for Johnny Mize.

Brewers Prepare For Bomber Clash

The Washington Brewers, now leading the American Professional Basketball League, will seek their third straight victory in the second half Sunday night at the Heurich gym, Twenty-sixth and D Streets Northwest, playing host to the Wilmington Blue Bombers.

Washington tripped the Bombers last week, 33 to 27, to open the second half, and in so doing arrested the eight-game winning streak of the Delaware team which beat out the Brewers for first-half honors.

day, to lend his support to the MacPhail plans. He agreed with MacPhail that before the war ends that $500,000 will have to be raised.

It was Griffith who instituted the first ball and bat fund, early in 1918. Organized baseball at that time was in danger of being closed down by the War Department. Griffith made a personal plea to the late Secretary of War, Newton D. Baker, and to Gen. Peyton C. March. He was able to get the game a reprieve from July 4, 1918, until Labor Day of that year. And to show the game's appreciation he began the ball and bat fund.

The first shipload of equipment raised by that fund went to the bottom of the Atlantic when the ship was torpedoed, but Griffith gathered together another boat load of bats, balls, gloves, masks, spikes, etc., and it arrived and was distributed at Army camps throughout France.

Night Game Issue Up Today

The question of how many night games should be scheduled this summer will be taken up tomorrow when Representatives of both leagues meet with Judge Landis. President Roosevelt has suggested that more than the ordinary seven arc-light contests be scheduled and all clubs in both leagues seem willing to play 14.

According to informed sources the National loop is definitely decided on a maximum of 14. A similar number is favored by all American League clubs except Washington, it was understood. President Griffith wants night games ruled by local option, which would enable each club to stage as many as it desires. Griffith is desirous of carding 28.

While the American League clubs generally are willing to go along with Griffith on his local option, reliable quarters give it little chance of success. All teams in both circuits must approve whatever schedule is decided upon and these sources point out that the National circuit's unanimity on the 14-game maximum will result in rejection of Griffith's plan.

All-Service Game Rejected

MacPhail's proposal that an All-Star big league team meet an All-Star Soldier and Sailor team which would embrace such luminaries as Sergt. Hank Greenberg, Boatswain's Mate Bob Feller and Private Cecil Travis among others, was rejected. His suggestion that the 16 major league clubs chip in a percentage of their reecipts and buy a flying fortress—to be christened the Kenesaw Mountain Landis—did not come up for discussion.

The American League owners emerged from their smoke-filled quarters late today to announce that they were in accord with the National League on the matter of permitting men in uniform to enter ball parks free of charge. The American League, however, said that each of its clubs could make up its own mind as to the number of uniformed men it would accept without tickets.

MacPhail wined and dined his fellow National League officials tonight, while the American Leaguers went their separate ways. Tomorrow morning the two leagues will meet with Judge Landis, and the "War Council" will come to its end.

Seven big league managers prowled around the corridors of the Hotel New Yorker all day, but no trades were effected.

Clemson Eleven Holds Drill; Releases Slate

By the Associated Press

Clemson, S. C., Feb. 2.—Forty-five football players reported to Coach Frank Howard for Clemson's preseason drills today.

Simultaneously the 1942 schedule was announced, with about the same opponents as last year. Boston College will help dedicate the new stadium.

The schedule:

September 19, Presbyterian at Clemson; 26, V. M. I. at Lynchburg, Va.

October 3, N. C. State at Charlotte, N. C.; 10, Boston College at Clemson; 22, South Carolina at Columbia; 31, Wake Forest at Wake Forest.

November 7, George Washington at Clemson; 21, Furman at Clemson; 28, Auburn at Auburn.

Eagles Face Skeeter Six Here Tonight

Their last crack at the River Vale Skeeters on home ice will be enjoyed by the Washington Eagles tonight when they play host in an Eastern Amateur League game at Riverside Stadium at 8:30.

The Eagles are particularly anxious to win this one, for in the last meeting of the teams here the Skeeters slid to an 8-2 victory, one of the locals' most stinging of the year.

Though every man on the Eagle lineup will have his own supporters, many Riverside fans tonight will be watching three lads from Saskatchewan—Winger Fred Weaver, Center Kenny Ullyot and Defenseman Keith Allen. The Brooklyn Americans, of the National League, hold strings on all three and may call them up in the near future.

Interest in McLanahan

Also of interest in tonight's struggle will be the play of Rolly McLanahan, another defenseman. The youngster played last season with the Guelph (Ontario) Juniors, moved up to Eastern League action this year, and may also be summoned by Brooklyn next season.

Whatever the outcome of the game, neither team will make much headway toward the top of league standings with a victory. Washington is well sunk in fourth place with 18 wins and one more loss, while River

Six Southern Conference Football Games on G. W. Schedule

Kentucky, Georgetown Fill Out Slate

Colonials Announce Eight-Game Card; Richmond, Citadel Among Newcomers

An eight-game football schedule for 1942 was announced by George Washington University yesterday, including six Southern Conference opponents and only Georgetown and Kentucky out of the league. The usual opening game breather has been dropped.

Kentucky's return to the schedule as the second half of the home-and-home agreement is the feature of the card G. W. played in Lexington in 1940. The University of Richmond and The Citadel are other additions while Manhattan, Washington and Lee, Bucknell and Mount St. Mary's are missing. Manhattan and the Generals may be back in 1943.

The Georgetown game was moved back to the last on the schedule, November 21, and will be played on Saturday afternoon instead of last year's Friday night trial agreement.

Johnny Fenlon, a star back for G. W. several years ago and recently appointed head coach at Richmond, will bring the Spiders here to open the season October 3, one of the Colonials' two Saturday afternoon home games.

Opponent Strength Varies

G. W. will play three games, all with conference opposition, out of town. They travel to Charleston, S. C., October 10 to meet The Citadel, a newcomer to the schedule. They meet William and Mary away from home for the second straight year, traveling to Williamsburg this time instead of Norfolk on October 24. The third game away will be at Clemson, S. C., November 7.

The remainder of the schedule will find Furman here October 16, a Friday night, and Wake Forest at Griffith Stadium November 13, also a Friday night.

The conference opponents are equally divided between the first and second division clubs of last year. William and Mary, which lost to North Carolina State in its last game, and with it tie for the conference crown with Duke, is touted as one of the best teams in the South next year. Wake Forest and Clemson were near the top last season, while Furman, Richmond and The Citadel were in the bottom half.

George Washington won one, lost seven and tied one last year and in the conference standings finished with four defeats and the tie with Washington and Lee.

G. W. President Cloyd Heck Marvin recently spiked all rumors by announcing that Head Coach Bill Reinhart would continue through 1942.

The schedule: October 3, Richmond, here; 10, Citadel, at Charleston, S. C.; 16, night, Furman, here; 24, William and Mary, at Williamsburg, Va.; 30, night, Kentucky, here; November 7, Clemson, at Clemson, S. C.; 13, night, Wake Forest, here; 21, Georgetown, here.

Cochrane's Injury By Auto Cancels 2 Nontitle Bouts

By the Associated Press

Providence, R. I., Feb. 2.—Welterweight Champion Freddie Cochrane, who was injured in Newport early Sunday morning when knocked down by an automobile, will have to pass up two nontitle bouts which has been arranged for him this month and next.

The champion was scheduled to appear in New Orleans on February 23 and in Philadelphia on March 10 against opponents to be selected. Both shows were for war benefits.

Cochrane, a boxing instructor at the Newport Naval Training Station, suffered a scalp wound, which required suturing, an abrasion of the left ear and a bruise on the calf of the right leg, according to his manager, Willie Gilzenberg, of Newark, N. J., who visited the boxer today.

Cochrane will be in the hospital for at least three weeks, officials said.

USLTA Planning Benefit Tourneys

prehensive tasks ever underwritten by the association," Ward said.

"We will try to get every public park in the United States to install proper lighting on its courts for night tennis—where such lighting is possible. We estimate that there are approximately 11,000 public courts in the country. We believe that most of these could be made available for night play. Some cities already have done this with great success—for example, Cincinnati, Los Angeles and Houston."

Ward said that there are about 5,000,000 persons who now play tennis with the existing facilities in this country. He believes that widespread extension of the night game would increase this number to about 8,000,000, making it possible for about 3,000,000 more workouts to improve their physical fitness during the emergency.

Concerning the three proposed patriotic tournaments, the U. S. L. T. A. head was convinced that such competitions would raise large funds for the service organizations, since all proceeds—entry fees of one dollar a player and spectator fees—would be donated.

"We are fortunate this year in having Decoration Day and the Fourth of July falling on Saturdays, thus paving the way for weekend tourneys," Ward continued. "Labor Day falls on a Monday, enabling that tournament to start on the preceding Saturday. We already have decided that proceeds of the first or Decoration Day tournament will go to the Red Cross. Winners of competition at each club will receive a Red Cross award."

The three tennis relief tourneys apparently will be conducted upon a basis similar to that announced recently by the United States Golf Association which is arranging for competition on its 5200 courses on Memorial Day, Independence Day and Labor Day for the benefit of the Red Cross. The U. S. G. A. believes that these tournaments will raise more than $500,000.

Sherwood Five Loses, 30-20, To Landon

Overcoming a Sherwood High lead after the first quarter, Landon Prep basketers romped to a 30-to-20 triumph yesterday on the Marylanders' court. It was their fifth victory in eight games this year.

Behind the efforts of Center Gates, Sherwood enjoyed a 4-to-3 margin going into the second period, but that quickly disappeared. The invaders were out front, 18 to 10, at the half and won comfortably. Gates, however, took down scoring honors with 12 points. Teammate Thompson was the only other Sherwood player to score, while Ted Brawner paced five London scores with 8 points.

New York Pointer Wins National Free-for-All

By the Associated Press

Shuqualak, Miss., Feb. 2.—Luminary, a black and white pointer owned by A. G. C. Sage, of New York, was proclaimed winner of the National Field Trial Club's free-for-all championship today, topping 34 other titular aspirants.

The pointer set a torrid pace in his final heat Saturday under the handling of Clyde Morton. Running a wide, smashing race, he had seven bevy finds; and despite the muddy fields he was still strong at the end of the three-hour heat.

Bourbon Bob, owned by J. M. Williams, of Philadelphia, Pa., was the only one which impressed the gallery in today's heats. He ranged wide and was credited with four bevies and a divided find.

Luminary's win made the first time in the national's history that the same owner has won both the derby championship and the free-for-all title. Astra, Luminary's offspring owned by Sage, won the derby championship January 27.

Catcher Hank Danning Signs Giant Contract

New York, Feb. 2 (AP).—The New York Giants announced today that Catcher Hank Danning had signed his 1942 contract. He was believed to have been paid about $15,000 last year. He had a bad season, hitting .244 and batting in only 56 runs, and his new contract was reported to have included a cut of about $2000.

Miller's 162 Paces Merchant Pin Match

A 162 single by Ham Miller, Washington Gas, and a 373 set by Sam DeLisi, Atlas Liquors, topped the Merchants League at Convention Hall, with the former's team taking highs after pinfalls of 618 and 1692. Atlas Liquors, Seaton's Barbers and Washington Shade won respective sweeps over Southern Dairies, Multigraph Sales and Jaffe Decorating.

Archer Beats Fenoy In a Bruising Battle

New York, Feb. 2 (AP).—Freddy Archer, Newark, won the decision tonight from Carmelo Fenoy, lightweight champion of Spain, after eight fast and bruising rounds in the ring at St. Nicholas Arena.

Archer, 137¾, used a two-fisted body attack to slow down the invader, who weighed 142.

Major District Fives On Road During Week

Maryland Meets W. and L. Tonight; Hoyas Play Colgate Tomorrow; G. W. at Virginia

The District's major college basketball teams will all be on the road today, Georgetown leaving for a three-game trip through upper New York and the Midwest, Maryland continuing its Southern Conference play in Lexington tonight, and George Washington in Charlottesville, where the Colonials, minus two subs who failed to pass exams, but with Matt Zunic, meet Virginia.

Zunic came through his midyear tests with passing grades and thus, if the services do not call him for another five weeks, the Colonial staf will be around for the rest of the season. Tom Keesey, a junior, and John Schumacher, sophomore, will likely be lost for the season as their midyear marks were below standard.

The Colonials will be favored to go over the .500 mark for the first time since the second game of the season. Virginia was unimpressive against Maryland Saturday and although the Cavaliers have been working on a defense to stop Zunic no team has accomplished that feat as yet.

Maryland will met Washington and Lee's first division club in a conference clash in Lexington tonight.

Coach Elmer Ripley and 10 members of the Georgetown squad will leave this afternoon at 3:45 for Colgate, where they meet the Red Raiders courtmen tomorrow night.

The Hoyas travel to Syracuse Thursday, where they will be underdogs to the Orange courtmen, who have one of the best records in the East. They knocked off Temple and Fordham last week, both conquerors of the Hilltoppers. G. U. will continue to Chicago, where they meet Marquette Saturday night.

Ripley will start Al Lujack in place of Ken Engles against Colgate's zone defense tomorrow night. Other starting players will be Bill Bornheimer, Buddy O'Grady, Don Martin and Charley Schmidli. Engles, Gabbianelli, Cleary, O'Donnell and Dieckelman will complete the ten-man traveling squad.

Stranahan, Toledo Golfer, Medalist In South Florida

By the Associated Press

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 2.—Frank Stranahan, Toledo, Ohio, won the medal in the thirty-sixth annual South Florida Golf Tournament here today with his 1-over-par 71. He was two strokes in front of Gene Dahlbender, jr., Atlanta, and J. A. Mason, Gulf Stream, Fla.

Tommy Goodwin, of New York, had to be content with a 74. W. A. Pagan, of West Palm Beach, recent winer of the Lake Worth championship, was five strokes behind the leader.

Others in the championship flight were Paul Cushman, Greenville, S. C., 75; E. E. Lehmann, New York, 75; John Cushman, Palm Beach, 77; Ted Bassett, New York, 78; I. L. Merrill, jr., Daytona Beach, 78; Leon R. Sikes, West Palm Beach, 78; Hayden Storz, Omaha, Nebr., 78; C. R. Topham, Wildwood, N. J., 79; W. B. Langford, Chicago, 80; M. Paxson, Yardville, N. Devitt Prep Scores, 24-23, In Baltimore

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Feb. 2.—Beaten in its last five starts, Devitt Prep basketers, of Washington, stepped into the victory column here today with a thrilling 24-23 margin over Mount St. Joseph. A field goal by Waitman Allen with 45 seconds of play remaining decided the contest.

In winning its second outing in seven games, Devitt was forced to rally strongly in the final four minutes before Allen's goal could win. It trailed, 17-22, when Seitz and Briscuso connected to cut the deficit to one point. George McGowan tied it up with a foul shot, but again the Mounts went ahead one point on Kidd's charity toss. Then came Allen's effort.

Briscuso's nine points topped scorers, though Teammate Seitz and the losers' Stevens and Kidd each had seven points.

Nebraska Bows To Kansas State

Manhattan, Kans., Feb. 2 (AP).—Kansas State's Wildcats won their first Big Six victory of the season tonight by downing Nebraska in a 38-35 thriller. It was the first win for the Wildcats in their last six starts.

Kansas State took a two-point lead in the first half minute of play and led all the way, holding a half-time margin of 21 to 15.

The Nebraskans started a rally soon after the second half got under way and tied it up at 27 all, but Danny Howe, senior Wildcat center, dropped in a long shot to put his team in front to stay.

Two Interhigh Rivals Clash This Afternoon

Somebody's championship hopes will be considerably dampened today when Central and Wilson, coholders of second place in the public high school basketball standings, come to grips on the neutral Roosevelt floor at 3:30. A sidelight in the interhigh series finds Western's powerhouse invading Anacostia at the same time.

Though the result of feature hostilities will toss neither contender out of the race, the winner will virtually assure itself of a place in the playoff tournament. And that winner is expected to be Wilson, the seasoned club with the terrific zone defense.

Coach Jack Ray, of Central, has been one of Wilson's prime supporters so far this season.

"On the basis of material," he says, "we (the Vikings) shouldn't even be in the running. Western, Wilson and Eastern should be up there at the top. But we've got spirit and that essential drive toward the basket. We've also got size."

Thus Coach Ray expresses confidence in his own club while flattering today's opponent. The fact remains, however, that Wilson will be favored, if for no other reason than the respective results of the two teams' games with Western. The Vikings underwent a 39-29 beating in their stand; Wilson ground out a 20-15 decision with a late spurt.

Otherwise the records further boost Wilson's stock. Only one loss, a two-point affair to Roosevelt, marks the Tigers' nine-game schedule to date. Central, on the other hand, has been thoroughly gone over by the G. W. frosh and its alumni as well as Western during eight games.

Western Favored

The Western-Anacostia matter should be settled in one quarter—in the former's favor. So far the hosts have shown nothing of the polish of Coach Clifton Moore's Raiders, and their ninth loss in 11 starts, four in the series, appears a near-certainty.

Eastern's game with Gonzaga at Lincoln Park may prove outstanding of the six other games listed in this vicinity today. At least it should prove whether the Tide's previous victory was a fluke or not.

TODAY'S SCHEDULE

Central vs. Wilson at Roosevelt, 3:30.
Western at Anacostia, 3:30.
Gonzaga at Eastern, 3:30.
G. W. High at Tech, 3:30.
Bethesda-C. at Rockville, 3:30.
Falls Church at St. Albans, 3:30.
Mt. Rainier at Maryland Park, 3:30.
Blair at Briarley M. A., 3:30.

Mount Vernon Five Triumphs, 37 to 33

Mount Vernon's clever quintet provided one of the high spots of District of Columbia Recreation League basketball last night at Central with a 37-33 edge on Ninth Street Christian, after coming from behind at the half.

Other games at the same site saw Francis Asbury trample United Brethren, 36-17; Calvary Baptist turn back Eastern Presbyterian, 31-20; Petworth nose out Douglas, 20-15; Calvary Methodist down Chevy Chase 27-20; and National City defeated Epiphany, 34-12.

Three games at Roosevelt saw Sixth Presbyterian top Washington Blue Jays, 20-16; Cardoza suffer a 22-12 loss to Colonials; and G. A. P. A. down the Executives, 27-18.

Ellett Sets Pin Record With 184

Pounding out high single of 184, Perce Ellett, scorer for the Odd Fellows League, found Russ Diehl's alleys to his liking for not only was the single a new high for the season, but came within three pins of equalling the all-time league high. Ellett's Amity No. 1 boys, currently six games ahead of Golden Rule, also posted a 634 season record game and won three from Metropolis. Set honors went to George Glossbrenner, Columbia No. 1, with 388 and when teammate Fred Sonneman came through with a 146 game, his team rolled high set of 1761 and scored a sweep over Eastern. Harold Hodges paced a whitewash by Golden Rule over Columbia No. 2 with his near high set of 375.

Pounds Makes a Confession

Miami, Fla.

Dear Boss,

I have a confession to make. I'm doing this in strictest confidence. Don't pass this information along. I don't want my children's children pointing at a picture of me in a Redskin headgear and saying, "That's grandpop and he was a traitor."

The Haights always were Northerners. During the Civil War my grandmother sat on the front seat of the family carriage with a shot gun loaded with screws on her lap hoping, as she put it, "To get myself a Rebel." As a youngster I heard this so much I had a mental picture of Grandma Haight turning the tide at Gettysburg. However, in later years I learned that she never pulled the trigger and that one of my uncles fired the original load in the general direction of some cats who were interfering with his sleep the night before President McKinley was inaugurated.

HAIGHT

Yes, the Haights are Northerners. I can remember back around 1910 that our family was still referring to people from Alexandria as Southern spies. Which reminds me that I believe I left "Gone With the Wind" turned with the title showing in our bookcase and I hope Aunt Maggy May don't take it in her head to go visiting around our way before I get home.

But, as I told you, I have a confession to make. Now, Boss, I didn't know the stuff was habit forming. Some of it was pushed in front of he. I tried some, rather reluctantly, and I've been a sucker along that line ever since.

Just what I'm going to do about this when I get back to Washington, I don't know. Maybe I can bring home enough to last me for a while but I shudder to think of the morning I awaken and my supply is exhausted.

Here's my confession: I like grits!

Boss, during the prohibition days, I thought I knew the best use for corn. But believe me, there's nothing like grits. You don't even have to ask for them down here. Just order ham and eggs and coffee and you get grits. I like them any way—sometimes I slip a paddy of butter on the top and wait until it melts; then again I make a valley in the center with my spoon and pour syrup in it. Grits with gravy and grits with cream and sugar—there's a couple of taste jackpots.

Grits are good with steak, too, Boss. You just pour your catsup in center, between the T-bone and the grits and let your fork sort of drag through them before you lift it. I'm going to like grits even better when I get home where I can clean my plate with a piece of bread as I generally do.

Boss, I'm going to have to cut this letter a little short today. I'm going now and have my appetite checked. I'm only getting three hours on a helping of grits.

Always your ace,
GRITS HAIGHT.

P. S.—Please tell accounting department that I made a slight mistake in addition on last week's expense account. The correct total should be $1231.39 and not $1231.43. Sorry.

Jim Braddock Runs Afoul of Girl Wrestler

That the female is the more deadly of the species was impressed vividly upon James J. Braddock, former heavyweight boxing champ of the world, as he went about his duties as guest referee of the wrestling show at Uline's last night.

The truth of this ancient adage was also impressed upon some 2000 fans who saw the big fellow emerge unscratched from a six-man rassle royal afteir having been practically de-shirted by a pair of babes hardly weighing 120 pounds each in an earlier bout.

The assault upon Braddock's person occurred in the match involving Ogla Baranoff, of Russia, and Betty LaBushey, who was announced as the world's top distaff groaner. Scheduled as a 15-minutes non-titular affair, Gentlemen Jim awarded the tiff to Miss Baranoff after 12 minutes when he became incensed at the strictly Dead End Kid tactics of La Bushy.

Jimmy Disgusted

Miss La Bushey, whose hair-do closely resembled her monicker, started at the bell to give the Russian gal the business. She raged across the ring and dropped on Olga with a body slam and head scissors. Olga cooled her off with a headlock and then Betty started the hair-pulling. Braddock remonstrated mildly at this breach of good taste, and Betty responded with a haymaker that was as wild as a war rumor. Braddock ducked it and pulled her loose from her victim and La Bushey went for his shirt.

This was not at all to James' liking and he waved the champ to the showers and gave the match to Miss Baranoff, who confessed that she passed up a promising modeling career for the ring.

Although Zim Zam Zum, the biological absurdity from Hindustan, failed to appear as advertised, the show had practically everything but Dumbo in it. There was a South American champion, Turkish Mustafa Hamid, the Little Man who had no hair, something in a garish red and yellow mask that was billed as the Golden Shadow, a Seminole chief, and handsome Bobby Bruns and Carol Krauser, two honest to John wrestlers.

Bruns defeated Krauser in 35 minutes in a rough, scientific session which saw both lads in the laps of the audience on more than one occasion.

The Turk Triumph

Then in the climatic six-man scuffle Hamid, the Turk, won out over a choice field composed of George Becker, Ivan Komaroff, Dan Blackman, Bamba Tabu and Jack Kelly. This victory was well-earned for the others ganged poor old Mustafa from the start, and only main strength and awkwardness kept him in the running—that plus a fair share of Moslem cunning.

George Becker bested Dan Blackman in 14 minutes with a body press, and the Golden Shadow put Chief Bamba Tabu, a synthetic Redskin, out in 10.

Ivan Komaroff, a Russian Cossack, and Mustafa Hamid drew in a 20-minute routine, which was enlivened when the performers rung in the referee, Nick Fierro, and pinned him a couple of times.

In the opener, Jack Kelly, of Ireland, drew with Carlos Firpo, the champion of the Pampas, in a scorching match which may have diplomatic repercussions in Eire and Argentina.

Dartmouth Sextet Snaps Boston Streak

Boston, Feb. 2 (AP).—The Dartmouth Indians put on a five-goal scoring blast in the second period while out-skating Boston College's previously unbeaten hockey forces for a 7-2 victory tonight at the Boston Garden.

It was the Eagles' first setback in a 20-game stretch that was started last season.

Sooners' Cager Flunks Out, Is Lost

Norman, Okla., Feb. 2 (AP).—Jack Gray, sophomore reserve forward, was lost to the University of Oklahoma basketball team today because of scholastic difficulties.

It was Coach Bruce Drake's second team loss in two days. Mitch Simon, another forward, left school yesterday to be inducted into the Army.

War Beclouds the Career of Warmerdam

Ace Pole Vaulter's Deeds Overlooked In Time of Crisis

By George Kirksey
United Press Staff Writer

New York, Feb. 2.—Some athletes were born at the wrong time and Cornelius Warmerdam, of the Olympic Club, San Francisco, seems to be one of them. The war wiped out the Olympic Games in 1940 and there's no telling when they will be held again, if ever.

But if the world wasn't aflame with war, Warmerdam probably would go down as one of the most remarkable athletes of all time. He's a pole-vaulter. That may leave you cold, but until you've seen Warmerdam in action you've never seen any pole-vaulting. He is poetry in motion—a symphony of muscle and skill soaring through the sky.

Until Warmerdam came along, nobody has ever touched 15 feet in the pole vault. But he's cleared or bettered that height 12 times in less than two years. The first time he cleared 15 feet was April 12, 1940, at Berkeley, Calif., and he's consistently equaled or bettered the height ever since.

Four times he's gone over 15 feet—15 feet 1⅛ at the national championships at Fresno, Calif., June 29, 1940; 15 feet 2⅝ inches at Palo Alto, Calif., April 13, 1941; 15 feet 4¼ inches and 15 feet 5⅝ inches at a Compton, Calif., invitational meet June 7, 1941.

Warmerdam will come to New York to compete in the thirty-fifth annual Millrose Athletic Carnival at Madison Square Garden Saturday and will try to become the first vaulter to ever clear 15 feet indoors (all his marks were made outdoors). The urgent indoor mark is 14 feet 7⅛ inches, set by Earl Meadows, the 1936 Olympic champion from Fort Worth, Tex.

I first saw Warmerdam in action in the Sugar Bowl track meet at New Orleans in December. In a drab setting with very few spectators in the stands, Warmerdam cleared 15 feet with amazingly little effort. He lounged around the edges of the vault runway, seemingly bored with the proceedings. Even when time for his trial came, he showed very little entnusiasm, leaving his warmup clothes on during his early vaults.

Like a Superman

But when Warmerdam, a lithe, blond young man of about 27 years, started down the runway, he was something to see. Moving with the grace of a panther, Warmerdam approached the bar almost stealthily. But once his vault started, he seemed to rise with the power of Superman, and, wriggling his body in graceful gyrations, to float over the standard.

If this was an Olympuc year, Warmerdam would be one of the toasts of the athletic world. Uncle Sam has developed few athletes superior to Warmerdam. It's too bad some of the luster of his glorious achievements will be overshadowed by the unpleasant business at hand.

Reserve Bank Assets Exceed Billion Dollars

Total assets of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond increased from $774,748,011 to $1,042,943,453 during 1941, the bank reported yesterday in a yearly review showing business and industry continued to maintain an accelerated rate and reached new records in several lines.

The number of member banks in the Fifth District, which includes the District of Columbia, rose from 431 to 447.

The report said practically all industrial plants in every line of work ran full time during last year, and many went on a multiple shift basis. Cotton textile mills consumed more cotton than in any earlier year and rayon yarn mills operated at capacity and could not meet all demands for rayon after the Government impounded raw silk stocks.

Shipyards in the district, the report added, employed every trained workman they could obtain, and used every available shipway in the yards.

Bituminous coal production in Virginia, West Virginia and Maryland rose 12 per cent above 1940, in spite of the fact that virtually all mines were closed during April, 1941, by a labor dispute.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

Clearings at New High

Washington bank clearings in January soared to $166,815,884, a new high mark for that month, and $34,628,602 more than in the same month last year. The previous January peak was in 1929, when clearings were $129,438,291.

Penn Mutual Life Insurance

New business of the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co. increased $29,337,903 in 1941, according to a report received at the Washington agency. Total insurance in force at the end of the year was $2,026,094,917 and total assests were $810,362,786. Resources in 1941 showed a gain of $29,337,903.

Cocoa Prices Set At Lower Level

By the Associated Press

New and lower price ceilings for all grades of spot cocoa as well as cocoa futures of the New York Cocoa Exchange, Inc., were announced yesterday by Price Administrator Henderson.

The new maximum prices are slightly under those prevailing on December 11, when the original price order was issued. The reduction was made, Henderson said, because the December quotations, taken as temporary ceilings, "froze the abnormal conditions then existing in the spot market."

The OPA also revised its price ceilings on black and white pepper futures on the New York Produce Exchange, Inc., and for spot pepper. The amendment is effective today.

The new ceiling on Lampong black pepper was fixed at 6.5 cents a pound, or one-quarter cent less than the maximum named in the price order issued on December 11. Price ceilings on both Muntok Ahite pepper and white small berries were raised one-half cent a pound to 11½ and 10½ cents a pound, respectively.

Huge Copper Mine Starts Operations

Morenci, Ariz., Feb. 2 (AP).—Phelps Dodge Corporation's 35 million-dollar open pit copper mine was in operation today after 4½ years of preparation.

Two ball mills in the big concentrator were working and other units will be placed in operation as soon as possible, reported G. C. Davis, general manager. The plant has a capacity of 25,000 tons of ore a day.

The Defense Plant Corporation has proposed a 28 million-dollar expansion for the mine to increase its output 80 per cent.

Steel Output Rate To Climb to 97.7%

New York, Feb. 2 (AP).—The Nation's steel producers will step up output to 1,614,200 tons this week from 1,607,600 tons last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today. Operations will be at 97.7 per cent of capacity against 97.3 per cent last week.

A month ago production was at 98.4 per cent of capacity, equivalent to 1,592,700 tons. A year ago, when total capacity was less than at present, mills produced 1,563,900 tons working at 96.9 per cent of capacity.

Interest-Free Loan Offered for War Effort

Wilmington, Del., Feb. 2 (AP).—An interest-free loan to the Government of $50,000 to aid the war effort was offered today by the North American Mutual Insurance Co. of Delaware.

President John W. Kane said in a letter to Secretary Morgenthau that he hoped similar action would be taken by "other corporations or individuals with idle cash."

Seat Price Up $1000

New York, Feb. 2 (AP).—Arrangements were made today for sale of a New York Stock Exchange seat at $22,000, an increase of $1000 from the previous transaction. The range of seats so far this year has been $25,000-$21,000.

Merrill Lynch Net Climbs To $459,258 During Year

Contrasts With Loss Of $308,621 in Previous Report

Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Beane, leading security and commodity commission house, yesterday reported a net profit of $459,258 in the past year, in contrast with a net loss of $308,621 shown in its first annual report, which covered only nine months of the preceding year.

The statement was released in Washington by George A. Garrett, resident partner of the investment house's branch at 815 Fifteenth Street Northwest.

The firm, which operates 15,000 miles of private wires and maintains offices in 92 cities from coast to coast, reported that it opened 29,886 new accounts in 1941, "a large number of which were reported directly attributable to advertising." The firm spent $196,483 for advertising and sales promotion, and said, "as in the past, newspapers received the major portion of our budget for publication advertising."

Bringing the big stock exchange house into the black out of the red in a period of the slackest stock market trading in many years was attributed by associates to the vigorous organizing abilities of Charles E. Merrill, who became active head of the organization, created by the merger of several firms, less than two years ago. Merrill, who took a leading part in the financing and development of several of the Nation's well-known chain store systems before entering the stock and commodity commission business, believes in giving service to customers at low cost and in letting his customers know about it.

GEORGE A. GARRETT
Resident Partner of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Beane

Pioneered in Reports

Merrill pioneered in the practice, unusual for stock exchange houses, of making public a detailed annual report a year ago.

The firm reported total assets of $77,908,587, of which $13,629,189 was in cash, and $56,747,771 represented receivables from customers in the form of debit balances in margin accounts. The firm's total income from operations for the year was $8,657,478.

The report said "we do about 7 per cent of the round-lot volume, 8½ per cent of the odd-lot volume on the New York Stock Exchange, and 8 per cent of the volume on the New York Curb Exchange. We do about 7 per cent of the volume on the New York Cotton Exchange, 13½ per cent on the New Orleans Cotton Exchange, and 5 per cent of the grain volume on the Chicago Board of Trade."

The profit was said to amount to less than 75 cents per transaction, and was attributed among other things to additional volume and savings through consolidations, a gain in the commodity business, and growth of underwriting and the over-the-counter activities. Income was reported to have come 47.6 per cent from listed securities, 25.9 per cent from commodities, and 26.5 per cent from underwriting and over-the-counter dealings. Comparable percentages for the predecessor firm of E. A. Pierce & Co. in 1929 were 78.6 per cent, 20.9 per cent, and 0.5 per cent.

Merrill said in connection with issuance of the report that he was optimistic about the securities business, that financing the war would make hundreds of thousands of persons investment minded, just as did the Liberty Loan drives of the first World War.

Hog Prices Soar To Four-Year Top In Lively Buying

Chicago, Feb. 2 (AP).—Hogs soared to a new four-year peak today as active buying by packing and shipping interests advanced prices 25 to 40 cents a hundred pounds.

Best hogs brought a top of $12.50 a hundred pounds. This was the highest price for swine here since August, 1937, when the top rose to $12.65.

Smaller receipts, rising dressed pork quotations and a bullish feeling that live hog costs were destined for higher levels was behind the upturn, livestock men reported. Average price for all hogs sold rose above $12.

Livestock men said hogs were far below levels which prevailed during the first World War. In September, 1918, the average hog price was $19.65. In the general price rise following the war hogs rose to an all time high average quotation of $21.85 in July, 1919.

'Quote Girls' Don Slacks at Curb

New York, Feb. 2 (AP).—There was less distraction at the New York Curb Exchange today—the "quote girls" have donned slacks.

The girls, hired to replace boys after Selective Service depleted the ranks, first worked in dresses at their jobs, which involve jumping up on a bench to change stock quotations. Dresses seemed inadvisable. There are still a few boys.

The official slacks adopted today, the girls said, seemed less drafty.

2 Directors Reelected By Farm Credit Group

Special Dispatch to The Post

Warrenton, Va., Feb. 2.—The Warrenton Production Credit Association reelected directors as follows: W. H. Hurt, Culpeper, and Roland T. Legard, Purcellville. Approximately 140 stockholders and guests attended the annual meeting here. Loans to farmers in the 11 Northern Virginia counties served by the association increased 8 per cent in 1941, according to Secretary-Treasurer Thomas D. Jones.

Missouri Pacific Factions Debate Merits of Plan

New York, Feb. 2 (AP).—John W. Stedman, spokesman for one group of Missouri Pacific Railroad bondholders, and Robert R. Young, chairman of Alleghany Corporation, which owns another series, in opposing statements today argued the road's reorganization plan, now before security owners.

Stedman, chairman of the protective committee for the road's first and refunding mortgage 5 per cent bonds and a supporter of the present plan, attacked a Young-sponsored alternative as having "no likelihood of success." He said it offered, "an undisclosed dilution of bondholders security by the issue of approximately $90,000,000 additional bonds . . . and an undisclosed grant to Alleghany Corporation of additionla new securities."

Young, whose proposal seeks to avoid profits taxes by adding income bonds to the suggested capital structure, said the Interstate Commerce Commission plan Stedman favors was 'insupportable on its merits under existing facts and recent developments."

Naval Ordnance Plant Finished in 387 Days

Pittsburgh, Feb. 2 (AP).—Construction of the 30 million dollar Naval ordnance plant at Canton, Ohio, has been completed—within 387 days after the contract was awarded, the Rust Engineering Co. of Pittsburgh announced today.

The plant, which will manufacture gun mounts and breech mechanisms, will be operated by Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co. in conjunction with an assembly plant at Louisville, Ky., also operated by Westinghouse.

Covering a total floor area of 713,000 feet, the plant consists of four manufacturing buildings, office, cafeteria, housing and incidental structures.

Failures' Total Gains

New York, Feb. 2 (AP).—Business failures increased to 248 in the week ended January 29 from 241 the previous week. Dun & Bradstreet reported today. Failures in the corresponding week of 1941 totaled 300.

Your Federal Income Tax

By Bureau of Internal Revenue

No. 30—Gains or Losses; Capital Assets

The term "capital assets" is defined as the property held by the taxpayer (whether or not connected with his trade or business), but does not include stock in trade of the taxpayer or property of a kind which would properly be included in the inventory of the taxpayer if on hand at the close of the taxable year, or property held by the taxpayer primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of his trade or business, or property used in the trade or business, of a character which is subject to the allowance for depreciation; or an obligation of the United States, its possessions, a State or Territory or political subdivision thereof, or of the District of Columbia, issued on or after March 1, 1941, on a discount basis and payable without interest at a fixed maturity date not exceeding one year from the date of issue.

Capital gains and losses are classified as "short-term" (applicable to capital assets held for 18 months or less) and "long-term" (applicable to capital assets held for more than 18 months). Such gains and losses are taken into consideration in the percentages shown on the return, based upon the period of time during which the assets were held.

Short-term capital losses are allowable only to the extent of short-term capital gains. However, any net short-term capital loss (not in excess of the net income for the taxable year) may bze carried over to the succeeding year and applied against the short-term capital gains not already offset by short-term capital losses in such year. The carry-over is restricted to one year.

In the case of a net long-term capital gain or loss, an alternative tax is imposed with respect to a gain if such tax is less than the normal tax and surtax on net income, and in the event of a loss, such alternative tax is imposed if greater than the normal tax and surtax on net income.

Where a taxpayer derives a net long-term capital gain and computes his tax under Section 117 (c) (1) of the Internal Revenue Code, relating to alternative taxes, the base for determining the 15 per cent limitation on the charitable contributions deduction provided by Section 23 (o) of the code and the earned income credit provided by section 25 (a) (3) of the code is "net income."

Where a taxpayer sustains a net long-term capital loss and computes his tax under Section 117 (c) (2) of the code, the base for determining the charitable contributions deduction is "ordinary net income"—that is, "net income" plus the amount of the net long-term capital loss—and the base for determining the earned income credit is "ordinary net income" as adjusted for the charitable contributions deduction.

General Motors Cuts Dividend To 50 Cents

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 2.—Directors of General Motors Corporation today voted a dividend of 50 cents a share on the common stock, a reduction of 50 cents a share from the payments made in June, September and December last year.

In the first quarter of 1941 a payment of 75 cents a share was made. The dividend is payable March 12 to stockholders of record February 13.

Approximately 21 million dollars will be distributed in dividend checks to the company's shareholders on March 12.

Financial quarters recently estimated the 1941 earnings of the giant automobile concern compared favorably with the $4.32 a share on the common stock earned in 1940 but suggested current earnings probably would be affected by the suspension of normal output of cars for civilian use and the cost of converting production to a full wartime basis.

Morgan & Co. Plans to Offer Stock Issue

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 2.—For the first time in its history, stock in the banking firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., Inc., will be offered to the public, according to announcement today by Smith Barney & Co., which said it had bought 16,500 shares and planned to sell them at $206 a share.

The announcement came 10 months after the firm, established almost 80 years ago, had taken the most far-reaching change in its history, for on April 1, 1940, J. P. Morgan & Co., a banking partnership, became J. P. Morgan & Co., Inc., a chartered bank.

The shares to be offered constitute 8.25 per cent of the total issued and outstanding.

The bank, world famous in its white-stone building at the corner of Wall and Broad Streets, in the heart of New York's financial district, has continued generally to conduct its business as an incorporated institution as it had as a private banking firm.

In the change-over from partnership to a corporation the partners became officers and principal owners of its outstanding 200,000 shares of capital stock.

The announcement today did not indicate the source of the stock now being sold publicly.

20 Million Dollars Capita

Nevertheless, it was reliably reported that about 20 of the stockholders contributed part of their holdings to make up the 16,500 shares to be offered in order to secure a wider distribution for the firm's stock, and that the idea of such a move had been under consideration since the time of incorporation.

The firm's 200,000 shares of capital stock have a par value of $100, making its capital 20 million dollars. Its surplus is 20 million dollars and undivided profits as of December 31, 1941, amounted to $1,214,540.

The Securities and Exchange Commission in 1938, basing its figures on the 1938 income tax returns of the then bank partnership, said J. P. Morgan had contributed only 9.1 per cent of the firm's capital, while Thomas W. Lamont, a senior partner but now vice chairman of the corporation's board, had an interest almost four times as large.

Those figures were challenged by George Whitney, now the bank president, but he refused to give what he said were the "correct percentages."

Earned $4,890,845

Net earnings for the year ended December 1, 1941, were $4,890,845, including security profits of $1,658,842. Net earnings per share were $12.15 excluding security profits, and were $20.45, including security profits.

An initial dividend of $1 per share was paid on June 16, 1941. On September 15 and December 15 dividends of $1.50 each were paid.

The bank owns a substantial stock interest in Morgan Grenfell & Co., Ltd., London, which conducts a private banking business.

This stock is carried on the books of the firm at $3,886,000 which, on the basis of the latest available balance sheet, is approximately $1,000,000 below its indicated value on the basis of current exchange.

Besides transacting a general banking business, the Morgan bank renders numerous corporate and personal trust and agency services and an investment advisory service to its clients.

Norfolk & Western Orders 1000 Box Cars

Roanoke, Va., Feb. 2 (AP).—An order for 1000 new box cars of 50-ton capacity has been placed with the Ralston Steel Car Co. of Columbus, Ohio, the Norfolk & Western Railway announced today. The railway company placed an order with the Ralston Co. for 1000 cars of the same type in April, 1941, and final delivery of the cars is expected this month.

Stocks Edge Unevenly Higher; Bonds Soften; Commodities Show Renewed Weakness

New York, Feb. 2.—Contradictions were the rule in today's financial markets.

While stocks managed to keep their balance, with trends slightly higher in the majority of cases, commodities exhibited renewed weakn ss and bonds generally presented a somewhat droopy appearance.

Traders in stocks were buoyed to a degree by the successful smash at Japanese mid-Pacific bases by the United States fleet and the stalwart MacArthur resistance to the invaders in the Philippines. Fears for Singapore, however, persisted and British African reverses were hardly a bullish argument. Taxes, signs of labor unrest and repercussions of war economy tended to cloud the hopeful picture.

The share list was mildly irregular at the start but prices steadied after noon and gains of fractions had the best of it at the close. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up .2 of a point at 37.8, first advance since last Tuesday. Dealings were negligible throughout the volume would have been much less than 330,270 shares, smallest since June 30 last year, had it not been for several sizable blocks of low-priced issues. Today's transfers compared with 377,490 last Friday. Standard Brands came out in one sale of 21,800 shares, off ⅛ at 4, its final figure.

Steels, motors, aircrafts, rails and oils gave a fairly good account of themselves.

A modest upturn in this week's mill operations aided the steels. Rails had the benefit of large allocations of steel and copper for maintenance purposes.

General Motors directors voted a dividend of 50 cents on the common after the close. In 1941 payments were 75 cents in March and $1 in the three succeeding quarters.

A bit depressing to recovery proponents, though, was the fact that Southern Pacific sold at only 12⅞, up ⅛, when the road reported net of $9.16 a common share, against $1.89 the year before.

Prominent gainers included United States Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, Santa Fe, Southern Railway, Pennsylvania, Texas Co., Anaconda, Douglas Aircraft, Sperry, Westinghouse, J. C. Penney, American Telephone and Montgomery Ward.

A shade in arrears were New York Central, Sears - Roebuck, North American, International Telephone, National Distillers and Canadian Pacific.

Commodities again were liquidated, apparently as the result of Administration opposition prices. Cotton ended off $1.50 to $2.40 a bale and was down nearly $3 at the worst. At Chicago, wheat lost 1⅛ to 1⅝ cents a bushel, corn conceded 1 to 1⅜, but hogs touched a new high mark since August, 1937, with advances of 25 to 40 cents.

Improved in the Curb were American Cyanamid "B," Bell Aircraft, Brewster Aero, Glen Alden Coal and Niagara Hudson Power. Lake Shore, Phoenix Securities and Sherwin Williams slipped. The aggregate here approximated 85,000 shares, versus 75,000 in the previous full session.

Year's Output Of Furniture Sets Record

By the Associated Press

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 2.—Output of household furniture in the United States during 1941 was estimated today by Seidman & Seidman, accountaints to the industry, to have attained a record total of 740 million dollars, some 200 million dlolars above the 1940 production.

A large part of the increase, the survey said, was accounted for by an advance of nearly 22 per cent in wholesale prices.

Noting that production activity in recent weeks has dropped off somewhat, Frank E. Seidman attributed this to the piling up of excess inventories by retailers. He expressed belief the industry was in a good position to continue operations without serious restrictions of output.

"The American consumer has relegated his home and its furnishings to a secondary position in recent years," Seidman said, "in favor of the automobile and similar "necessary' products. Now that the avenue of expenditures will be restricted in some of these fields, there is every reason to believe that the large potential and unsatisfied furniture replacement demand will flower into reality."

Bank Loans Rise $57,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press

Business loans of banks jumped last week.

The Federal Reserve Board said that commercial, industrial and agricultural loans of banks in 101 leading cities totaled $6,778,000,000 on January 28, which was 57 million dollars more than the preceding week and $1,702,000,000 more than a year ago.

Although rising most of the time in the last 18 months these loans had fluctuated in the last few weeks.

Southern Pacific Nets $34,573,667

New York, Feb. 2 (AP).—The Southern Pacific Transportation System and separately operated, solely controlled affiliated companies, in a preliminary statement today, reported 1941 net income jumped to $34,573,667 from $7,146,349 in 1940. On a per share basis this was equal to $9.16, against $1.89 in 1940.

Earnings Report

Transue & Williams Steel Forging Corporation reported for 1941 net income of $561,033, equal to $4.16 a share, compared with $102,225, or 76 cents a share, in 1940.

Vogt Manufacturing Corporation and wholly owned subsidiaries in 1941 earned net profit of $397,103, equal to $1.98 a share, against $413,110, or $2.06 a share, in 1940. The company makes textile products for the automobile and airplane industries.

Reliance Manufacturing Co. of Illinois and subsidiaries earned net profit in 1941 of $535,859, equal after 7 per cent preferred dividends to $2.08 a common share. This compared with $239,902, after a reserve of $90,000 for contingencies, equal to 73 cents on common in 1940. The company said a change in the method of valuing yard goods inventories during 1941 reduced profits by about $240,000.

Great Northern Railway in a preliminary report disclosed 1941 net income of $16,785,159, equal to $6.71 a share, compared with $10,208,194, or $4.08 a share, in 1940.

Lone Star Cement Corporation reported consolidated net profit for 1941 of $4,081,753, equal to $4.30 each on 948,597 outstanding shares, compared with $3,457,293, or $3.57 on 968,765 shares in 1940.

Decentralize War Program, Urges Eaton

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Feb. 2.—America's victory program can be achieved only by immediate and complete decentralization of the war production program, Cyrus Eaton, Cleveland industrialist, declared today in a letter to Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board.

President Roosevelt's program for planes, tanks and guns "is too big to be run from one city, and especially from a city like the National Capital," Eaton sfid in the letter which he made public here.

The industrialist advocated use of existing ordnace districts as a basis for regional organization of the new arms program.

"We are already paying in military setbacks and casualties the heavy price of insufficient production," Eaton asserted, adding:

"The summons to defense jobs in Washington of swarms of people—many of them political and financial dilettantes who know nothing about industry—has increased, rather than lessened, the difficulty of delivering the goods . . .

"It is time to stop suppressing geography. End the onrush of 'opulent okies' to Washington and send home those who are already there. Keep only a skeleton staff in the Capital to say what things are needed. Leave the rest of the job to regional authorities."

Ruthless Paring Of Unessential Bureaus Urged

Winter Park, Fla., Feb. 2 (AP).—A "Ruthless paring of unessential bureaus and committees" was recommended today by Frank F. Brooks, Pittsburgh, Pa., banker, in outlining a program for economic conduct of the war.

Brooks, a speaker at the opening session of the seventh annual Rollins College economics conference, proposed:

"1. An intelligent allotment of the needed financing to be taken care of by present taxation and the portion to be deferred through borrowing by the Government.

"2. Complete elimination of nondefense and nonwar spending and a ruthless paring of unessential bureaus and committees.

"3. Encouragement of private financing of enterprise to the end that some satisfactory ratio may be attained between private debt and public debt.

"4. Simplification of our present tax system."

Visible Grain Supply

New York, Feb. 2 (AP).—Visible supply of American grain showed the following changes from a week ago (in bushels): Wheat decreased 1,323,000; corn increased, 2,935,000; oats decreased, 259,000; rye decreased, 68,000; barley increased, 287,000.

Contract Bridge

Here are two problems, in the form of questions on bidding and play, for you to solve:

1. Sitting North, you hold these cards:

♠ A K 10 9 7
♡ A Q 4
◇ A J 7

The bidding has gone:

West	North	East	South

What call do you make?

2. Sitting East, you hold these cards:

♠ 8 5 3
♡ 9 4 2
♣ Q J 10 8 5 3

The bidding has gone:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	2 ◇	Pass	?

What call do you make?

Answers to Quiz

1. North's best strategy is to bid three no trump, even though he lacks a club stopper rather than double and risk having partner respond in clubs beyond the three-no-trump level. North's hand is too strong for a three-spade overcall, and a four-spade call would be dangerous, as South might not have adequate trump support.

2. As West's two-diamond call has not been doubled, there is no need for his partner to rescue him in clubs, and East would be wise to pass. If East bids three clubs, West will think his partner has a strong hand and may keep on bidding. When East passes, West's two-diamond overcall probably will be doubled by South. East may then feel safe to take out at three clubs, as West will recognize that call as a rescue effort.

Listen! with Glynn

No danger of Bob Burns, modern "Arkansas Traveler," ever forgetting the melody of his theme song. "Flip" will see to that.

"Flip" is a whistling bird, an orange and black trupial from India, and he has learned the famous old folk melody, note for note, since Burns got him several years ago.

The bird is a special pet of Bob's, and lives in a cage the Sage of Van Buren has built in his bedroom. In addition to a varied repertoire—including opening match boxes, finding lost collar buttons under the bureau and imitating a dive bomber—"Flip" is now being taught to whistle the national anthem by Burns.

Trupials belong to the parrot family. But they learn much faster than either parrots or myna birds.

Burns, whose program, "The Arkansas Traveler," is heard over WJSV every Tuesday night, also has a lot of other birds around his San Fernando Valley farm in California. Included is a flock of pure-bred chickens, 15 varieties in all, which Bob personally supervises.

Bob learned to care for fine poultry while a youngster in Van Buren, Ark. Now, he builds brooders, feeders, incubators and perches for his flocks in his own well-fitted workshop, and even goes so far as to raise thousands of "meal worms" (a type of beetle) for use as chicken feed.

The "Arkansas Traveler" has laid out rows of neat pens in which his flocks of chickens are kept separated. He has even improved upon a certain type of insect repellent light which he installed about the pens.

Morgenthau Discerns No Fiscal Clouds

By the Associated Press

A $1,112,926,899 appropriations bill to finance the Treasury and Post Office Departments for 1943 went to Congress yesterday with assurances from Treasury Secretary Morgenthau that the Nation's fiscal affairs were in better shape than in the first World War and were free from danger signals.

"Right now," the Treasury Secretary said in testifying before a House Appropriations subcommittee, "I think the way values of stocks, bank stocks and commodities have stood up is absolutely amazing—that is, the little fluctuation, there has been.

"I hope it will continue that way," he added, "and I think with all safeguards and brakes that we are adding the situation looks much more hopeful than it did in World War I."

His testimony, and that of other officials, was made public by the committee in sending to the House the bill covering the Treasury and Post Office Departments expenses for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Of the total amount, $209,956,976 was designed for the Treasury Department, and $902,969,923 for the Post Office Department. It represented an increase of $25,604,633 over the comparable expenses for the current fiscal year, but a reduction of $4,902,036 from the amount estimated as necessary by President Roosevelt.

Representative Ludlow (Democrat), of Indiana, asked Morgenthau during hearings on the bill whether he saw any "danger signals" concerning the Nation's solvency.

"None," Morgenthau replied. He explained that with the new price control law and the system of allocations and priorities on materials "we are hopeful that real inflation will be prevented."

"We in the Treasury feel," he said, "that through our sales of defense bonds to the working men we will absorb a considerable portion of their savings, and also that through sales of our other forms of Treasury securities we will attract to the Treasury unused working capital."

After Daniel W. Bell, Undersecretary of the Treasury, told the committee that the present 65 billion dollar debt limit would have to be raised very soon, Morgenthau testified:

"If we win (the war) the wealth and resources of the country will be here, and if we lose, whether the debt is 100 billion dollars or 500 billion dollars is unimportant."

System Will Show Where Lags Occur, WPB Chief Declares

By Alfred Friendly

Post Staff Writer

War production boss, Donald M. Nelson, yesterday made public the workings of a progress-reporting system designed to show up lagging officials as well as lagging production lines.

The system, involving daily reports in production of 300 principal military items, was termed by Nelson 'one of the most important steps we have yet taken in the entire war program."

Significantly, Nelson added, "through the use of these reports the responsibility on each official of the War Production Board will be clear and definite. Just as they will reveal the progress of all phases of the war program, so also will these reports measure the performance of every one of us. Alibis will be impossible. Any failure to get results will be instantly revealed—and will be acted upon."

His Answer to Criticism

The statement was seen as Nelson's answer to criticism that he has been too slow to get rid of OPM holdovers who have either indicated that President Roosevelt's war program cannot be achieved, or who have failed to make the necessary production arrangements.

Informed officials said that the progress reports will reveal immediately who such officials are and will, at the same time, provide the evidence on which their discharge can be based.

Nelson indicated that, as chairman of the WPB, he had committed his organization to the President's full war production goal and had set the schedules on his progress reports to meet the objectives for this year and the next.

It was explained that the system, devised by Stacy May, WPA progress reporting chief will keep detailed reports up to date on each of the principal 300 items. Each day, Nelson and other top officials will receive a report sheet showing current progress on those items that need attention. On any day the sheet may include half a dozen or a dozen items.

For each of the items, it was explained the sheet will show, first, the total quantity which must be delivered during the current month to meet the goals set by Mr. Roosevelt. Secondly, it will show the quantities delivered each day during the month, presenting a cumulative total, so that an official can tell at a glance if the program is being met for each item.

Sounded Warning At Pearl Harbor

Officials Ask Ship Strikers To Return

Four high war officials yesterday called upon striking welders in Pacific Northwest shipyards to return to work and "repudiate the leadership which has encouraged a reckless disregard of the needs of the country."

The request was made in a joint statement issued by Chairman Donald M. Nelson of the War Production Board, Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox and Chairman Emory S. Land of the Maritime Commission.

They asserted the walkout was "officially regarded as an attempted impairment of the war effort" and "difficult to understand."

50 Picketing Welders Return at Tacoma

Tacoma, Wash., Feb. 2 (AP).—Fifty welders abandoned a picket line and entered the Seattle yard of the Seattle-Tacoma Shipbuilding Corporation for tonight's shift as the back-to-work movement of welders spread in both Tacoma and Seattle.

Officials of the company, which is constructing more than one million dollars worth of ships, said the return of the group which had been on the Seattle picket line raised to 328 the number of welders on the shift, about 70 short of the normal crew.

At the big Tacoma plant, the A. F. of L. Boilermakers' Union, which holds a closed-shop contract with the corporation and does the hiring, said about 400 welders reported.

Others lined up at the union hiring hall to get their cards brought up to date. Walter L. Green, vice president and general manager, said a "substantial number of welders" had reported back in Tacoma.

Charles Brinkerhoff, leader of the 1180 welders who began the Tacoma walkout Friday, said his observers had counted only 15 welders going into the plant today.

All of the few welders who walked out of the Boeing Aircraft Works, in Seattle, returned to their jobs.

Associated Shipbuilders in Seattle also reported only a "few more than normal absences today at this plant."

Work at all the plants continued and observers said it would take at least a full week's layoff by the welders to stop ship construction completely.

The welders walked out after a few of their number were discharged for nonpayment of dues to the A. F. of L. The welders seek to form an independent union.

Quisling 'Peace' Has No Support, Norse Envoy Says

Belief that the appointment of Maj. Vidkun Quisling as Norwegian premier by Adolf Hitler was intended to give a legal color to a peace treaty between Norway and Germany and to a declaration of war by Norway on the 26 United Nations was expressed by Wilhelm Morgenstierne, Norwegian Minister to the United States, at a press conference yesterday.

"But it is quite obvious that any so-called peace treaty signed by Quisling will have no significanae either in constitutional or in international law," said Morgenstierne. "It is King Haakon of Norway and his government who are the legal representatives of the sovereign state of Norway during this war, and nobody else has the power to conclude peace on behalf of Norway. And if Oslo declares war on the United Nations it will be done by Quisling and his fellow Nazi puppets and not by the Norwegian people."

All 20-Year-Olds Not Required To Register Feb. 16

Some 20-year-olds are not required to register for selective service February 16, the Nation's third R-Day of World War II, District Selective Service officials pointed out yesterday.

Only those who became 20 on or before December 31, 1941, come under the act requiring registration of all men between the ages of 20 and 45.

"In other words," explained William E. Leahy, District selective service director, "all unregistered men who were born between February 17, 1897, and December 31, 1921, must register."

Men between the ages of 21 and 35, who registered in 1940 and 1941, are exempted from the new registration.

D. C. Red Cross Fund Mounts To $278,933

Efforts are being made through the International Red Cross to communicate with American prisoners in Japan, it was announced yesterday in Washington where new contributions boosted the District Red Cross War Fund to $278,933.46.

Speaking to 200 women attending the first class of a staff assistance course being conducted in the Hall of Government at George Washington University, Miss Mabel T. Boardman, national secretary of the Red Cross, said there had been no communication from the Japanese government regarding American prisoners "but the delay may be due to the fact that the Japanese communicate with the International Red Cross in Geneva and they in turn get in touch with the American Red Cross."

The staff assistance course is designed to familarize women with Red Cross functions and to aid them in choosing the volunteer service for which they are best atted. Miss Boardman's talk was the first in a series of lectures which over the next four weeks will cover the disaster and war relief activities, history and volunteer special courses of the Red Cross.

Among the larger contributions to the District Red Cross war fund yesterday were: Union Trust Building attorneys, $1518; WJSV, $1067.75; Mr. and Mrs. Clarence W. Grosner, 2611 Thirty-first Street Northwest, $500; Carnegie Illinois Steel Corporation, $800; National Geographic Society, $309; Charles Schwartz & Son, $221; Marvin's Credit Co., $130; Gilbert G. Emerson, $100; Elite Laundry employes, $94; Arthur M. Godfrey (second contribution), $100; Office of the Commissioner of the Philippines, $34.47; Holton Arms School and Junior College, $100; Lady McLendon Lodge, Order of the Daughters of Scotia, $25; Abbestos Workers Local No. 24, $25; Norwegian Society of Washington, $20, and the Corcoran Gallery of Art, $25.

Meantime, the District Red Cross announced the appointment of John Saul as chairman of the chapter's disaster and preparedness relief committee.

GOP Criticism Is 'Unfair,' Flynn Asserts

By the Associated Press

Chairman Edward J. Flynn of the Democratic National Committee charged last night that the Republican Party had launched a campaign of partisan politics demonstrating it to be "not as much interested in winning the war as it is interested in controlling the House of Representatives."

This, he said, in a radio talk, was a regrettable effort by 'peanut politicians" to "destroy and disunite our people," but one which he was sure would not succeed.

He saw the beginning of the Republican campaign looking toward next fall's Congressional elections in the appointment January 4 of Clarence Budington Kelland to be G. O. P. publicity director. Kelland, he commented, "is widely known by reason of his highly entertaining fiction."

On January 8, Flynn continued, Kelland made an address and quoted President Wilson as saying:

"We do not need less criticism in time of war, but more. It is hoped that the criticism will be constructive, but better unfair attack than autocratic repression. Honesty and competence require no shield of secrecy."

The Democratic chairman contended that Republican speakers since that time had repeated this quotation and followed it with "unfair criticism" of the Administration's war efforts.

As one instance, he cited the January 12 address broadcast by Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., the Republican national chairman. In this address, Martin suggested former President Herbert Hoover for price-control administrator, and urged that the Administration call in Republicans and anti-New Deal Democrats of demonstrated ability to aid in the war effort.

Flynn said President Roosevelt long before the war had appointed Henry L. Stimson and Frank Knox, who are Republicans, to be Secretaries of War and the Navy respectively, and that the OPM had been staffed "overwhelmingly with men whose political affiliations were not Democratic but Republican." Mr. Roosevelt did not, he said, "take discredited men who were rejected by the people . . . for public office."

Palmer Sentenced In Oil Lease Fraud

Albuquerque, N. Mex., Feb. 2 (AP).—L. M. Hines, of Denver, convicted by a Federal jury of using the mails to defraud in connection with sale of New Mexico oil and gas leases, was sentenced today to one year in prison by Federal Judge Colin Neblett.

A. H. Palmer, Washington, D. C., who served as a vital materials coordinator during World War I, and was a codefendant with Hines, also was sentenced to a year upon his guilty plea.

Slow-Down Threatens Steel Output Slump

Chicago, Feb. 2 (AP).—A spokesman for the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation predicted today that the output of the Gary (Ind.) tinplate mill would slump further unless 80 employes ended a "slowdown."

"We are using a mass-production technique and the effects of the slow-down now threaten to spread through the entire mill," he stated.

He reported tinplate shipments had dropped to 25 carloads a day from the former level of 40 or 50, and that 1900 workers were idle.

Halifax Urges Fighting Faith

New York, Feb. 2 (AP).—Lord Halifax, British ambassador to the United States, said tonight that he believed the gospel of pacificism during the present war should appeal less to Christians than to any other community of human beings.

"The faith of a Christian compels him to acknowledge the existence of evil in the world," he said in an address for delivery before the Church Club of New York. "The Christian further believes that this (Christ's) redemption was only accomplished by great suffering . . .

"He is not at all surprised, therefore, by the fact that one of the first laws of human life is that the forces of evil have to be perpetually conquered by suffering. He finds consolation and reassurance in the conviction that the suffering of each human being can be wonderfully transformed by association in this great redemptive act of Christ."

The Ambassador said that Christianity must constantly be on guard to see that human values affecting the lives of men "are not submerged and strangled by some economic law that ought to be men's servant rather than their master."

Lord Halifax said that "if we are to defeat Hitler and those who serve him with an almost religious fervor, our faith must burn with a flame as white as theirs."

"The deepest anxiety before the world today," he said, "must be the future trend of thought in this 80 million of virile people set in the middle of Europe, whose minds have been so cruelly and so dangerously debased. . . .

"Those who wish to save Germany from the pit into which she has fallen must themselves have their feet set firmly on the rock."

Far East Rubber Will Flow to U.S. Again, Jones Says

Federal Loan Administrator Jesse Jones yesterday told the House Banking Committee the United States should be getting "all of the rubber we need out of the Far East" by the end of 1943 or the first part of 1944.

It was Jones' way of predicting that the Japs are going to take a bad licking.

"Those fellows can't keep us out of the Pacific," Jones told the committee.

Testifying for his bill to increase RFC borrowing power another three and a half billion dollars, Jones said that despite the new synthetic rubber plants coming into production next year, the need for strict rationing will continue.
